Major cuts for import duties

OTTAWA (CP) — Industries, farmers and fishermen will face tougher competition from abroad as a result of major reductions in import protective duties announced today.

In return, exporters should find it easier to sell their products in foreign countries because of reduced tariffs agreed to in international talks concluded in Geneva.

The net result, federal trade officials say, should be lower prices for consumers and increased efficiency by producers.

Trade officials say the agreement, released in capitals around the world today, calls for cuts in Canadian import duties averaging 40 per cent, to be introduced over eight years beginning Jan. 1, 1980.

Canada's major trading partners — the United States, Japan and the nine-member European Economic Community (EEC) — will cut their tariffs on Canadian goods by about the same amount.

The cuts are part of the new General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) started in 1973 in an attempt to lower some of the barriers that inhibit world trade.

Mutual tariff cuts agreed to by Canada and its trading partners affect nearly every sector of the economy, although officials say that Canada was more successful in some areas than others in the negotiations.

Officials say major gains were made in obtaining reduction or elimination of tariffs in such items as forest products, machinery, chemicals and plastics, agriculture machinery, transportation equipment and aircraft, furniture, fish, agricultural products and non-ferrous metals.

A major exception was textiles and clothing which will continue to receive the high level of protection the industry now receives in Canada and most developed countries.

Officials say this country made major gains in obtaining reduced tariffs on agricultural products sold to Japan and the United States and more limited gains on farm products sold to the EEC.

The fishing industry, which has been growing quickly since the imposition of the 200-mile limit, is expected to get a further boost from significant tariff cuts on exports to the U.S. and Japan. The EEC has agreed to tariff cuts and quota increases on 12 items.

The booming forest industry, which has seen exports surge in the last two years because of the lower value of the Canadian dollar, will get further help from major tariff cuts in the U.S., Japan and the EEC.

The cuts in U.S. tariffs on more highly-finished wood products "should encourage further resource upgrading in Canada prior to export," the trade department said.

Officials said Canada made only limited gains in its goal of getting bigger tariff reductions on more highly-processed mineral products.

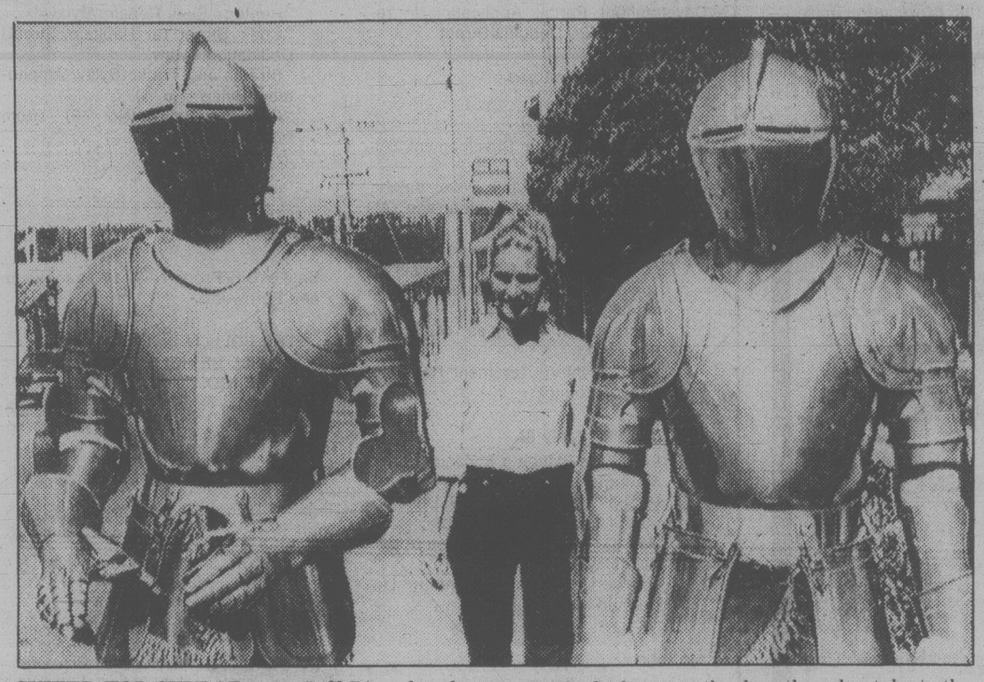

At present, tariffs tend to be low or non-existent on raw materials but face higher tariffs as they are further processed.

"It was not possible to achieve fully the Canadian objective of eliminating or substantially reducing U.S., EEC and Japanese tariffs over the whole range of non-ferrous metals and semi-fabricated products," the department said.

But there were some gains in the area of semi-processed products.

The U.S. and Canada, for example, each will eliminate a tariff of one cent a pound on aluminum ingots. U.S. tariffs are also to be reduced on insulated and non-insulated wire and cable.

There were few gains in negotiating barriers to sale of iron and steel in the U.S., where import quotas now are in effect.

SUITED FOR SKYLAB were Jeff Risond and Ralph Brumheller of Monterey, Calif. Debbie Reyko looks on as the dauntless duo take to the street ready for anything.

Skylab Day in Victoria . . . just a crashing bore!

Skylab's re-entry proved a crashing bore to Victorians today.

As the projected time for splashdown (although a lot of youngsters claimed to be hoping for a crash-down in their backyards) passed this morning, Victorians interviewed by The Times expressed massive indifference to what proved to be a local non-event.

"I heard it was landing elsewhere so I'm not too worried," said B.C. Hydro Transit supervisor Ron Paterson as he stood under the protective marquee of National Trust on Douglas Street. "But my kids are worried."

Paterson said that when the possibility of Skylab landing on Victoria had come up, his seven-year-old daughter, Sharlene, commented she hadn't lived very long.

"Kind of a strange thing for a kid to say," Paterson remarked, adding that his son had also expressed some concern.

A grandmother who wouldn't give her name suggested a similar thing about her grandchildren, aged 9 and 12.

"The kids seem to be upset," she claimed.

But youngsters in downtown Victoria today didn't seem too interested in the possibility of 80 tons of space debris raining from the skies.

"I'd be damned flattered if it did hit me," was the reaction of Margaret Hardy of Simcoe Street. "Think of the odds against it. I'd be unique."

When asked what he was doing under the Woolworth marquee, Jerome Parnell, 24, from Masset in the Queen Charlotte Islands, said: "They told me it was going to rain."

What about Skylab? Parnell was fatalistic.

"If it's going to hit us, there's not much we can do about it. If it's coming down, we can't change that."

Betty Kirchner, 23, of Shelbourne Street, believes the contention of one radio commentator that the whole brouhaha about Skylab was contrived by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to focus public attention on the cutbacks to its budget.

She also believes they had the technological know-how to bring Skylab down anywhere they choose.

Valerie Hay, of 885 Craigflower, a pert 13-year-old who was born in Ontario and moved here seven years ago, has to be disappointed.

She predicted this morning that Skylab would come down somewhere in eastern Canada.

About a half-hour later, it splashed down in the Indian Ocean. So much for Valerie's career as a prophet.

Molten debris falls into sea

Times News Services

Skylab, a ghost ship with a proud tradition, plummeted back to earth like a flaming meteor today. Trackers said tons of molten debris fell into the Indian Ocean southwest of Australia.

No one reported any pieces falling on land.

About 20 tons of fiery metal were scattered over 5,920 kilometres of the Indian Ocean, the North American Air Defence Command reported.

NORAD said the largest pieces of Skylab apparently hit at the front of the 160-kilometre wide corridor about 320 kilometres from the southwestern Australia city of Perth.

It was nighttime there, which made the flaming pieces clearly visible in the atmosphere.

NASA officials said the final plunge was at 42 degrees 87 south latitude and 105 degrees 97 east longtitude — a point off the southwestern corner of Australia.

Skylab ended six years and 874 million miles of flight around Earth with a tumbling, wobbling, rolling dive into the upper fringes of the atmosphere at 10,250 km/h beginning to disintegrate at 9.10 a.m. Victoria-time.

As the world waited for the final break-up, airports were closed and flights delayed including several in Vancouver.

Check-out clerks get $9.08

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unionized supermarket clerks on Vancouver Island and in Greater Vancouver voted 95 per cent to accept a new contract that gives them hourly increases of 90 cents in each year of the two-year pact.

The agreement, retroactive to April 1, raises the hourly wage for a full-time clerk-cashier with 12 months experience to $9.08 effective Monday. Part-time employees get $9.73.

General clerks will earn $9.78 an hour full-time and $10.48 as a part-time employee. Produce managers, who get the top rate, will make $12.08 an hour at the end of the contract.

The 3,500 employees, members of the Retail Clerks International Union, are the first of 9,300 workers to vote on the contract.

Protesting police return

BATHURST,N.B. (CP) — For the second time in 12 hours striking city policemen decided today to end their seven-day-old strike and return to work.

Talks between city and its striking police and outside workers broke off about noon today and the outstanding issue was turned over to the provincial government for settlement.

Blair Boucher, chief negotiator for the police, said it was decided the rank structure issue which was holding up agreement would be submitted to binding arbitration.

Immediate efforts began to advise policemen and get them back to work by late afternoon.

"The men want to go back to work," Boucher said. "We will do everything we can to bring the situation of the last few days back to normal."

In the last few nights, vandals have run wild in the city's downtown area.

"With the help of the public we will do all we can to bring those people who have violated the law before the courts."

The mediator waited this morning while city council debated the explosive strike behind closed doors for 90 minutes. Then he called for a meeting with union leaders after council said it will not budge on a controversial rank structure clause.

Hewitt incensed by Hydro move to block sale

B.C. Hydro's bid to block a major provincial gas sale to the U.S. without informing the cabinet has incensed Energy Minister Jim Hewitt.

The same day Hewitt issued a glowing press release giving details of the major natural gas sale he learned of Hydro's surprise appeal to the National Energy Board in Ottawa not to let the deal proceed.

In his press release, Hewitt said he expected no trouble getting NEB approval for the sale of up to 110,000 million cubic feet per day of gas to the El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Hewitt, who sits on the Hydro board of directors and is the cabinet minister responsible for the public utility, said he will meet with chairman Bob Bonner and other officials to discuss their action.

Hewitt said if Hydro officials have objections to the gas sale, then they should have discussed them with him. Instead he found out about their move after they appeared before the NEB.

Bonner's action was lauded by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) who said Hydro's decision to seek a delay is correct.

"We should not be asking the NEB to authorize additional exports of natural gas from B.C. because it is a fuel that we are going to dearly need in the future," Macdonald said.

Macdonald, who at one time was the cabinet minister responsible for the province's energy policies said the government is exchanging some quick money at the expense of future generations.

He said the gas should be sold for at least $3 a thousand cubic feet and not the $2.16 U.S. a thousand cubic feet.

Buckle-up $350 fine

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A man who refused to sit down and buckle up as an Air Canada flight landed in Toronto last March has been fined $350 in provincial court.

William Sims, 48, was charged under Air Navigational Orders with failing to keep his seat during the landing of an aircraft.

Canada faces gas shortage

Times News Services

TORONTO — Ontario and Quebec could be facing spot gasoline shortages, especially in super unleaded gasoline, if Canadians continue using much more gasoline than oil companies or federal energy planners have predicted, according to the Globe and Mail.

If these spot shortages begin, it may lead to dangerously tight supplies of heating oil in Eastern Canada late this winter.

And Alberta refineries are running at maximum production levels in an attempt to keep up with demand.

Figures from the National Energy Board show that the growth of demand for gasoline in April rose 6.2 per cent across Canada, the newspaper says.

It says board figures, which so far have not been made public, indicate that Eastern Canada's demand for gasoline rose seven per cent in April.

The newspaper quotes the board as saying growth was 4.2 per cent in May — more than double the two per cent expected by most experts.

Edmonton area refineries are also trying to build up fuel oil inventories in Quebec and the Atlantic provinces.

Oil company spokesman said the increased requirement for refined products, which normally peaks in July, is related to demands within Canada and not to any additional exports to the gasoline and diesel-hungry United States.

Alberta oil fields, meanwhile, have been called upon to produce 22 per cent more oil than they did in July, 1978. Production rates authorized by Alberta's energy resources conservation board call for flow rates equalling those of peak demand levels last winter.

New setback for woods pact

Negotiators for the Canadian Paperworkers Union withdrew conditional acceptance Tuesday of a two-year contract proposed by the forest industry.

Art Gruntman, vice-president of the 7,500-member union, said the bargaining committee decided not to recommend the offer due to inability to agree on an issue involving 230 striking pulp workers from two locals in Mackenzie.

Gruntman said a tentative agreement will go to the rank and file for a ratification vote without recommendation. Vote results are expected next week.

Workers at B.C. Forest Products Ltd. and Finlay Forest Products Ltd. in Mackenzie want an additional northern isolation allowance in return for the extra week of vacation the companies originally gave them to go to the mills and then took away in 1977, Gruntman said.

Dick Lester, president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, said an isolation allowance cannot be given "without affecting the whole industry."

He said the union was told three times during negotiations the allowance would not be negotiated as a local issue.

Earlier, 750 pulp workers at Eurocan Pulp and Paper in Kitimat voted 70 per cent to end their strike after the two sides agreed on a union demand for changes in shift scheduling.

Despite this, the number of striking workers in the B.C. forest industry increased to 9,000.

Picket lines set up by Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada at the MacMillan Bloedel plant at Harmac near Nanaimo spread to mills at Crofton, Prince Rupert, Powell River and Prince George. The closures affected 5,000 workers, some of them Canadian Paperworkers members who honored picket lines.

Another 4,000 workers, mostly from the International Woodworkers of America, remain off the job in the Alberni Valley on Vancouver Island.

Earl Foxcroft, president of the woodworkers local in Port Alberni, said he was advising the workers to return to work so they might vote on the proposed pact.

Negotiators for the woodworkers have recommended that the 28,000 coastal members accept the contract. Bargaining resumes today for 7,500 southern Interior IWA members.

The Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers union has recommended its 6,000 members reject the pact, which calls for a pay increase of 90 cents an hour in the first year and 9.5 per cent in the second year. The base rate in the forest industry when contracts expired last month was $8.16 an hour.

Major quake rocks China

TOKYO (AP) — An earthquake measuring six on the Richter scale and more than 40 aftershocks hit Jiangsu (Kiangsu) province in east China, killing 11 persons, injuring several dozen in one commune and causing casualties in two others, Xinhua (Hsinhua) reported today.

The official Chinese news agency said most of the houses in one commune were destroyed by the quake, which struck Monday, about 70 per cent of the structures in a second commune were ruined, and some reservoirs were cracked.

"Up to this morning, more than 40 shocks at under magnitude four had occurred since the first quake," Xinhua said. It said that relief teams have been sent to the stricken area to aid victims.

The agency said the earthquake "spread to a considerably wide area" and that shocks were felt in the cities of Shanghai, Zhenjiang (Chenchiang), Nanjing (Nanking), Wuxi (Wuhsi), Changzhou (Changchow), Suzhou (Suchow), Lianyungang (Lienyunkang) and some counties in Zhejiang (Chekiang), Anhui (Anhwei) and Hubei (Hupeh) provinces.

The quake struck at 6:57 p.m. Monday and was centred in Liyang County in southwestern Jiangsu province, Xinhua said.

In addition to listing 11 persons killed in one commune and several dozen injured in another, it said "there also were casualties in two other communes."

It said that "some reservoirs in the quake-afflicted area show cracks."

Buried alive, but survives

BEAVERLODGE, Alta. (CP) — Perry Pierson, 20, of Berwyn, Alta., was purple and near death when he was dug out of 1.8 metres of dirt he'd been buried under for 30 minutes.

But Pierson, trapped at the bottom of a manhole, survived his ordeal Tuesday after a backhoe operator dug him out.

Police said Pierson was working at the bottom of a 4.8-metre-deep manhole when a heavy equipment operator accidently dumped a load of dirt into the hole.

A backhoe operator immediately began digging up the concrete around the manhole to get to Pierson.

Alberta, B.C. fastest growing

OTTAWA (UPC) — Alberta continues to have the fastest population growth in Canada while the growth rate has slowed in five other provinces, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

The agency said booming Alberta was growing at a rate of 28 persons per thousand as of April 1. British Columbia was the second fastest growing province with a growth rate of 15 per thousand, while Newfoundland and NOVA Scotia followed with rates of nine per thousand and eight per thousand respectively.

A total of five provinces recorded a declining rate of population growth, including Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Ontario, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba. Quebec's rate of growth stayed virtually the same.

The agency said Canada's growth rate slowed because of a decrease in international immigration into the country. In fact, only 7 percent of the April 1 population increase was attributed to immigration.

Statistics Canada said the nation's population on April 1 stood at 23,644,800 — an increase of more than 200,000 at the same time last year.

Estes guilty of fraud

DALLAS (UPI) — Billie Sol Estes, farmbelt flimflam man whose legendary fertilizer swindle made his name synonymous with easy money in the 1960s, today was found guilty of fraud and tax evasion charges.

The federal jury had deliberated since Thursday in reaching a verdict in the complicated case involving 22 charges contained in a 31-page indictment.

The jury reported about noon that all 12 members had agreed Estes was guilty on at least one count of fraud and that the former swindler and a business associate, Raymond Horton of Abilene, Texas, were also guilty of attempting to hide their assets from the Internal Revenue Service.

But the jury, with many members showing the strain of long hours of deliberation, told Federal Judge Robert Hill they were unable to reach a decision on the heart of the prosecution case — whether Estes and Horton had bilked three leasing companies out of $600,000 through leases on non-existent steam cleaners.

Judge Hill immediately ordered the jury to resume deliberations.

In 1978, Estes pleaded guilty to lesser fraud charges as part of a plea bargaining agreement.

Sobbing Berry gets 120-day jail term

The aging rock-'n'-roll idol heard his sentence pronounced, choked back sobs and said: "I'm sorry. It shall never happen again." Chuck Berry was going to jail again. Berry, a founding father of rock 'n' roll, was sentenced Tuesday to 120 days in prison and 1,000 hours of community service — primarily concerts for the underprivileged — on his guilty plea to charges of tax evasion. U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson gave the singer-guitarist 30 days to get his affairs in order before reporting to the federal prison farm at Lompoc, Calif., Aug. 10. The musician's lawyer, Bruce Hochman, also said he expects Berry to pay more than $150,000 in penalties. Berry, wearing a conservative grey three-piece suit, wept as he stood before Pregerson and spoke of his aged parents, asking for lenience in their interest. "It's impossible to hide the results of this from my parents," he said. "They are very old. I seem to get publicity on all the wrong things."

Meanwhile, it took no Sherlock Holmes to solve the mystery of the missing travellers' cheques. All it took was the sharp eye of an Omaha, Neb., supermarket cashier for the signature of her own mother. It began when someone stole $500 worth of cheques from Sandra L. Rock while she was visiting her daughter, Kimberly. It ended a week later when a woman came through Kimberly's check-out line and presented a cheque to be cashed. Kimberly took one look at the signature and called police who arrested Rita Marshall of Emporia, Kan., and charged her with forgery. No one has computed the odds involved in the scenario.

Also on the way to the slammer is cat burglar David Brewster, known respectfully at Scotland Yard as the King of the Mayfair Rooftops, was sentenced Tuesday in London to 10 years in prison. Old Bailey criminal court jurors heard tributes to Brewster's skill, daring and professionalism before convicting him of two burglaries involving $157,620 worth of jewels. The prosecution said 33-year-old Brewster, who stands 5-feet-4 and lifted weights, climbed mountains and played soccer to keep fit for his dangerous occupation, admitted stealing $1.1 million worth of jewellery in three months last year. The jury heard that Brewster haunted narrow ledges and balconies in London's swank Mayfair district, where half a million dollars is not considered an excessive price for an apartment. The prosecution said he operated at heights at which occupants had what proved a false sense of security.

Finally on the legal front, federal civil servant Hilary Schwenk, 26, stepped off an Ottawa curb last September and was hit by a Canadian Forces automobile. The can of paint she was carrying smashed though the auto's windshield. Now the military wants her to pay a $490 repair bill. She's considering taking the matter to small claims court.

Former U.S. president Richard Nixon plans to leave his California retreat Thursday for a one-day visit in Mexico with the deposed Shah of Iran, a Nixon friend says. Nixon has said he was looking forward to seeing the shah, a friend from days when both were in power, because "if the United States doesn't stand by our friends when they are in trouble, we're gonna wind up without any friends."

Simon Fraser University has established a permanent $500,000 endowment fund in the name of the late W. A. C. Bennett. The fund will be invested with interest going to assist students, stimulate faculty research and finance periodic appointments of outstanding academics.

And finally, a thief who stole $2,500 from a 24th-floor room at the Hotel Toronto probably doesn't know how lucky he was that the occupant was out. The room was rented to Wilt Chamberlain, former star in the National Basketball Association who is over seven feet tall. Toronto police said today Chamberlain reported the money was taken from his room while he was staying at the hotel between last Thursday and Monday.

Sandinistas holding gun on Managua

MANAGUA (AP) — Sandinista rebels threatened a new attack on the Nicaraguan capital today as President Anastasio Somoza hung on and his army made no progress against the guerrillas.

The guerrillas' Radio Sandino had said the attack on Managua would begin Tuesday, but the offensive did not take place.

However, the national guard sent extra soldiers to the eastern slums which the guerrillas occupied for 18 days and then evacuated two weeks ago under heavy attack.

The guard said it shot down a twin-engine plane bringing ammunition to the guerrillas in Rivas, 100 kilometres southeast of Managua, and said its planes continued bombing rebel positions in Rivas and Masaya, 32 kilometres south of the capital.

The guerrillas said they ambushed guards in Ciudad de la Paz Central, west of Managua, and the northern towns of Tipitapa and Santa Ana.

The Sandinistas have battled the national guard to a standstill a Rivas and in the last six weeks have won control of 26 other cities and towns, forming a noose around Managua. They also control a stretch of territory along the southern border with Costa Rica, which served as the launching pad for their latest offensive.

Somoza held a news conference in his fortified headquarters in Managua and implied he would resign and leave Nicaragua if the survival of the national guard and his Liberal party were assured. But he said he would "fight to the end" if they were not.

He said his departure depends heavily on U.S. talks in Costa Rica with the provisional junta that the Sandinistas named. He said he trusts in the strength of the United States to work out an agreement with the junta.

U.S. Ambassador William Bowdler met for the third time Tuesday with the three members of the five-member junta who are in Costa Rica. The results of the talk were not made known, but previously Bowdler proposed that the post-Somoza government include representatives of the national guard and Somoza's party and that the junta be enlarged by two more "moderate" members to dilute the influence of the leftist Sandinistas. The junta rejected both proposals.

Somoza hedged on when asked how long his troops could last against the guerrillas. "They might last a month, they might last years," he said.

New cracks show in DC-10 tests

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — There was more trouble for the grounded DC-10 Tuesday as new federally-ordered inspections turned up cracks in yet another area of the engine support pylons on three planes.

The discoveries are certain to delay for at least several days the jet's return to service.

However, two legal barriers to allowing DC-10s to fly were removed Tuesday. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia overturned District Judge Aubrey Robinson Jr.'s ruling requiring the Federal Aviation Administration to give 24 hours' notice before lifting its grounding order.

And William Fowler Jr., an administrative law judge for the National Transportation Safety Board, dismissed the FAA's grounding order, but permitted two days for appeal to the full board. If more time is needed, the FAA will appeal, the agency said.

Also Tuesday, the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) released its report of DC-10 maintenance practices by the eight U.S. airlines that fly them and found a number of problems in procedures, in training, in exchange of information and in the FAA's own supervision.

Depositions supporting the report show that the pylon on the American Airlines DC-10 that crashed in Chicago May 25 and killed 273 people was roughly handled by American Airlines mechanics.

Two histories

It is not as visible as the political rift threatening to sever Quebec from the rest of Canada, but the gap that separates English-Canadian and French-Canadian historians is of considerable significance. It threatens to grow into an unbridgeable gulf that will leave us with very little as a common heritage.

They agree on certain basic facts of the past, that there was a Battle of the Plains of Abraham, that John Cabot discovered Canada, but the interpretations and the theories they weave out of these facts are so different that there are really two histories of Canada.

From Montreal, Canadian Press reports on the failure of academics to come up with a "pan-Canadian version" of our history, one that could be taught to students in Quebec as well as Ontario.

"A bicultural summing up of the Canadian reality seems more remote in 1979 than it did a decade ago, when the idea was aired at a Toronto education conference," it said last month.

Prof. David Smith of McGill University said that interest at official levels in Quebec in establishing a pan-Canadian approach to Canada's history for high school students "is very thin, very disappointing.

"Quebec is so preoccupied it doesn't consider it important."

The provincial education department is in the midst of drafting a "Quebec civilization course" for high school and junior college students. Almost certainly it will take an ethnocentric approach to events, emphasizing Quebec to the point of excluding much else that other Canadian students are taught as a matter of course.

Jacques Robitaille, president of l'Association des Professeurs d'Histoire du Quebec, said that attempts to produce a pan-Canadian history are a lost cause. The present generation of Quebec historians and teachers subscribe to the interpretation of Quebec as colony versus the colonizers, i.e. Canada. In English-Canadian history books the nasty word "imperialism" only comes up in discussions of that fervent movement of the first decades of this century to bind the British Empire together in a close federation.

"The principal question [for Quebecers] is 'who are we?' It's a question of identity" said Robitaille. And the question has been asked since the British conquest of New France 220 years ago.

Jean Corbeil, who is in charge of developing the new civilization course for the junior colleges, said Quebec historians have always been a part of a separate school, concerned only with events in French Canada. They dealt with a people defined by their culture, race and Roman Catholicism.

The rise of nationalism unconnected with the church has reoriented Quebec historians' work, but not by much. Now the horizons are delimited by the Ottawa River on the west and the New Brunswick woods on the east, the sovereign territory of citizens of Quebec.

This intense interest in purely Quebec affairs is not limited to historians, of course, but one would have expected a somewhat wider and more realistic perspective from the elite of the education establishment, knowing that an independent Quebec will have to coexist on a continent of 230 million predominantly English-speaking people. A passing acquaintance with their roots, their history would be useful if the day ever comes.

Truth in metrics

Oak Bay-Gordon Head MLA Brian Smith has doubtless won the hearts of many older Victorians with his proposal that B.C. adopt a "truth in metrication" policy.

The policy, which Smith hopes to draft into a private member's bill, would require that everything in B.C. that is labelled with metric measurements also carry the measurement under the old imperial system. It would, Smith says, ensure that manufacturers and merchants don't get away with hidden price increases when they switch their products over to metric measurements.

It's a useful point. What consumer, for instance, is dedicated enough to figure out whether 100 grams for 57 cents is an actual price increase over the previous price of six ounces for 63 cents? (It is, in fact, an increase of slightly more than 50 per cent per gram.)

Nearly any chump, however, could figure out that a company decreasing its package size from six to 3.52 ounces (the imperial equivalent of 100 grams) while lowering its price only from 63 to 57 cents is doing its best to rip off the consumer.

Once Smith gets the bill drafted, the government should seriously consider adopting it into law, rather than letting it lie on the shelf like so many backbencher's bills.

RICHARD GWYN

A social order that works

TOKYO — An aspect of Japan that takes some getting used to is that many of its leaders, in politics, in industry, in the civil service and elsewhere, are second raters. Amiable types certainly, but intellectual dullards.

"It is better if leaders are not outstanding," explains Tokyo University anthropologist Chie Nakane. "If a leader is too bright, he will make decisions too easily. His subordinates will be left with nothing to do, and will become alienated."

I had to stop myself from saying, "Ah so."

Surely, no society is less like ours than is Japan. It is thoroughly modernized, yet — another observation of Nakane's — its social structure is essentially unchanged from feudal times. Our moral regulator is guilt; Japan's, as Ruth Benedict remarked in The Chrysanthemum and the Sword, is shame. Ethical questions seldom trouble the Japanese; questions of correct behavior obsess them.

Economic success

Yet Japan works. Better, in many respects, than we do.

Japan's economic accomplishments are almost boringly familiar. If futurologist Herman Kahn is right, Japan, although with half the population, will surpass the U.S. in total wealth before the century is ended. Certainly, it will top the U.S. in gross national product per capita in a year or two.

Less well known, but just as considerable, are Japan's social accomplishments. I only realized this fully when back in Vancouver. I spotted a friend across the terminal and, without thinking, walked over leaving behind a briefcase with my wallet and passport in it. Suddenly, I realized why I had done it. Ten hours earlier, in Tokyo's Narita airport, I had toured the terminal without a care while my briefcase remainded unguarded and untouched.

Consider that among Tokyo's 11 million citizens there is exactly one armed robbery a day. Consider that a unilingual tourist can hand over his yen-laden wallet in a store and have removed from it — always — only the exact change. Consider that a taxi driver, his car as spotless as his white gloves, will never drive you a single block further than he should.

Harmony is Japan's abiding goal. It has maintained it while transforming a frugal, agricultural society into a consumption-crazy, urbanized one. No drugs. No alcoholism, virtually. No unemployment, virtually. A divorce rate that is the lowest among industrialized nations, and, a more telling statistic, 90 per cent of divorces are arranged by mutual consent.

Japan, it has been said, has achieved communism without going communist. Its society is rigidly stratified. Yet is is fluidly egalitarian. There is little inherited wealth. Unlike the west, the son of a peasant has as good a chance of becoming president of Mitsubishi as the president's son. The careers of both will be determined, irrevocably, by their school marks.

. . . amiable, but dull

"Japan can be a mirror for America . . . We can learn from Japan, just as Japan has learned from the West," writes Harvard sociologist Ezra Vogel in his just-published Japan as Number One.

To buy the notion of Japan as a role model isn't easy. Race prejudice, not to dodge the point, is one reason. Many Japanese traits cannot be exported, and anyway we would not want to import them. Docility. The demeaning obeisance to anyone with higher status. The ethnocentricity. The hostility to character differences of any kind, whether those of the free spirit or of a late bloomer who never, through his life, will be able to compensate for low school marks. The lack of intellectual inquisitiveness.

All of those things said, it is time to say some things about Japan from which we could learn.

Lifelong employment. For us, to spend our entire career with the same company would be stultifying. Consider, though some of the consequences. Employers accept the social responsibility (that ours dump upon government) of ensuring jobs for their employees.

Employers are anxious to upgrade the skills of their employees, because they know they will never leave. Employers are anxious to suggest productivity improvements, and labor-saving techniques, because the know they always will be employed.

Social order

Leader-subordinate relations. We count on our leaders to tell us what to do. The Japanese rely upon themselves. Decisions are made by consensus. Everyone, no matter how junior, is involved.

Once a decision is reached everyone is committed to it because everyone has had a share in it. Now you realize why unremarkable leaders are an advantage. It's a necessary feature of "participatory democracy" that we never grasped.

Social order. As inheritors of the Greco-Roman tradition of individualism, Japan's hierarchical society system offends us. Yet as energy shortages, conservation and rationing loom ahead of us, we may have to impose limits upon individualism anyway. And at times social order can be more humane than individualism.

"When I visited the U.S., nothing so appalled me as the treatment by students and by young professors of older professors who were past their prime," said Nakane. "They were treated without respect. Here, their status is never questioned."

How, I asked Nakane, do Japan's universities "hide" tired, old professors? She grinned? "We send them to international conferences."

". . . the tests indicate it's acute appendicitis, which qualifies you for our standby list . . ."

Carter reaches rock bottom

NEW YORK — President Carter has reached the low point not only of his administration but perhaps of the postwar U.S. presidency. That is bad for the man and worse for the country; either he pulls things together in the immediate future or the rest of us are stuck with a virtual lame duck in the White House for the next 18 months.

Carter's celebrated cancellation of his energy speech may well have been the worst public relations blunder since Richard Nixon's "Saturday night massacre" (no other comparison intended). No "firestorm" of protest resulted but what did follow may have been worse. As an Atlanta businessman (et tu, Brute!) put it to The Wall Street Journal:

Myriad of problems

"People have said a lot of bad things about Nixon. They called him a liar and a cheat and a crook. But they never called him ineffectual. Ineffectual is just about the worst thing you can say about a president, and it's what people are saying about Carter."

Indeed they are, apparently even within his own administration, which appears disheartened and disconcerted — but not just because of the cancelled speech. In addition to that, and all it says about this administration's lack of an energy program:

- Inflation is running at an annual rate of about 13 per cent and Carter has no effective program for dealing with it — not even wage and price controls, which he once again ruled out during his Camp David retreat.
- As the SALT debate begins, the treaty is by no means assured of passage, particularly since minority leader Sen. Howard Baker came out against it; and if majority leader Robert Byrd is right that the Soviets have softened their position against amendments, ratification could be even further threatened.
- Carter is lacerated by defection and revolt within his own party, where draft-Kennedy sentiment, is widespread and growing; nor does the president seem to know how to deal with this phenomenon, or to discipline those who flout his leadership.
- The polls now show that Carter would lose to Republican Ronald Reagan, if the election were being held today, while Howard Baker trails the president by only 47 to 40 percent. This far ahead, the importance of these polls is to give further impetus to those Democrats who want to nominate Edward Kennedy in 1980.
- Perhaps the unkindest cut of all is a poll of 10 Confederate states showing that Kennedy would carry every one of them, including Georgia, in primaries against Carter (Texas was not polled). Disastrously for the president, black voters — whose majorities carried most of these states for Carter in 1976 — opted for Kennedy, 60 to 29.

The only rays of political relief in this grim scene are the slight decline in unemployment last month and the mobilization of 20 Democratic governors at their Louisville meeting to endorse the president for renomination and re-election. Even the latter gesture was diluted by the fact that 12 other Democratic governors either abstained or opposed the endorsement.

Besides, the Democratic governors cannot recover Carter's position; neither can his cabinet or his other policy advisors or his image-makers. All can give counsel and encouragement, put the best face on things, and stand by the captain of the ship. In the end, he and only he can make the decisions and give the performance that will begin the restoration of public confidence.

Those decisions and that performance can only be in the field of energy policy. Long lines at the gasoline station, the threat of renewed shortages and further rising prices, next winter's impending scarcity and high cost of home fuel oil, the unvexed mastery of OPEC over the nations of the west, of which Jimmy Carter is or should be the leader — all these shape the immediate public context in which Americans expect their president to act, decisively and persuasively.

Politician's duty

The latter word is important. One of Carter's signal weaknesses has been a preoccupation with the details of program and policy, for which a more confident president would have been willing to rely on hired thinkers, and a concurrent disinterest in the vital politics of winning public acceptance of what he proposes. But presidents are elected fundamentally to carry the country and however high-minded Carter may be in eschewing politics, arm-twisting, jawboning and all the other arts of persuasion, he is only recoiling from the first duty of political office.

Maybe what Carter needs is not just a televised speech on energy policy, but to take to the stump around the country for as long as required to convince Americans that a crisis is at hand demanding their sacrifice and co-operation and effort. Is the moment less important, for example, than the situation in the Middle East to which Carter so effectively devoted himself — all but exclusively — for long periods last fall and winter?

Of course not. And only when he regains the confidence of the country on energy can Carter hope to have it on SALT and the economy, much less in the politics of 1980.

Hyperactivity

I wonder if there is something about the treatment of hyperactivity that Dr. L. L. Coleman knows that the average doctor, and psychiatrist in this city doesn't know — or is the whole medical profession holding back information and succor to all those harried parents of hyperkinetic children?

According to Dr. Coleman, in his column July 6, there are a number of very excellent medical tests available that can definitely tell you whether your child is indeed hyperactive or just a normal, healthy overly active child. If that is the case, why are they not used?

The usual procedure here is, after little Johnnie has ripped the home apart and driven the parents to the brink of divorce, the doctor — who is treating the mother for "nerves" with a whopping prescription of valium, agrees to see Johnnie. Little Johnnie, has the vague notion the doctor is going to cut his head open if he isn't good, decides to make a supreme effort to be still. The doctor looks at the child for five minutes and declares him one hundred per cent normal.

It isn't until Johnnie or his parents are in serious trouble that little Johnnie is referred for psychological tests, thus it will be formally proved that little Johnnie is hyperactive, or maybe just overactive and has a poor attention span and is left-eyed and right-footed.

As little Johnnie is in the hands of nice conventionally-minded professionals, he will be prescribed counselling and some drug, maybe Ritalin or some other tranquilizer. If this does not work, he'll be changed to another stronger drug or a bigger dosage. Permanent brain damage from prescribed drugs has happened even in Victoria.

Dr. Coleman is right, the Feingold diet does not work for all children. However, as junk food is undesirable, such a diet will do them no harm. For some children, vitamin treatment helps and for others attention to a food allergy and or hypoglycemia, etc.

Research into hyperkinesis is still in its infancy, although great strides in this area have been made by a few dedicated doctors and biochemists. The average doctor knows little on the subject and is not really interested in learning more — perhaps understandably as treatment is time-consuming.

Unreported in any newspaper in Victoria was a recent convention held at the University of Victoria, of all the greats in the field of orthomolecular medicine and biochemical research. I think Victoria readers would have been interested in at least some of the papers, particularly the scientist from Switzerland who is successfully treating children with Down's syndrome. Perhaps Dr. Coleman attended and can tell us the details. — Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria Avenue.

Cruel harvest

This is in support of Robert H. Mann's excellent letter in a recent issue of the Times, in which he protests the decision of B.C. Environment Minister Rafe Mair to permit the poisoning of wolves. The decision is indeed a shocking one.

The use of poison on wolves and the cruel leghold trap to catch other wild creatures are only two of the horrors to be perpetrated upon our wildlife if the proposed wildlife management plan is implemented.

A copy of this proposal is obtainable from the Fish and Wildlife Branch, Ministry of Recreation and Conservation, at 1019 Wharf Street (upstairs). It is free. I urge those of the public with humane instincts to call at that office and obtain a copy. They will be pleased with its illustrations of wildlife, which are beautifully executed, but there pleasure will cease.

They will be horrified by its proposals. It is an encouragement to hunters, the human predators. There does not seem to be a species of wildlife, animal, bird or reptile, in this province that it does not propose to "harvest."

Let this be considered a call to action to those who protested to Mr. Mair's predecessor about the original report of his intention to poison wolves, and to all others who read this blood-thirsty plan and are horrified by it, to write to the environment minister, to your own MLA or to the premier and protest this proposed plan. — J. A. Knight, Victoria.

A great loss

It is with great sadness that I read that Jim Hart, the federal fisheries officer who attempted to shut down 90 acres of Queen Charlotte timber (a Japanese-owned subsidiary of one of their huge multinationals) for gross logging practices on the banks and slopes of a major salmon-producing stream, has quit. In the process of taking photographs and doing research in the Queen Charlotte Islands, I have met Jim Hart in his professional capacity as a fisheries officer — and I can state catagorically that he is the best and most conscientious civil servant I have ever met. For the understaffed federal fisheries to have lost Jim, they have lost, in effect, the rest of the salmon-producing streams to destructive and unenforced logging practices.

The B.C. Forest Service's multi-use resource planning concept is a public relations buy-off and as it is currently applied is nothing but a hollow joke. — Richard Krieger, 1260 Walnut Street.

PBS network may be forced to start running ads

Down in the lower Rio Grande valley of South Texas, Francisco Briones has been slaving away for the past five years. The people down there are poor: Even by the lax standards of official measurement nearly half of them fall below the poverty line. The great majority are Mexicans and their average income is $1,400 a year. But Francisco has not been slaving to support his family. He was devoting his energies to raising $4.5 million to start a television station. Scheduled to be on the air a year from now, it will be the first public broadcasting channel owned and run by one of America's racial minorities.

Francisco may have come in on the crest of a wave — or he may find himself stranded in a financial morass.

The Public Broadcasting System is still a minority taste, but its audience has been growing steadily. Five years ago it was watched for part of the week in 20 million homes. This has now increased to 30 millions, or 40 per cent of the potential audience.

Without endless interruptions for advertisements, station announcements, promotional slots, news flashes, and almost any other device that can be used to come between the viewer and his chosen program, PBS, by comparison, seems an oasis of calm continuity.

But this public calm is offset by considerable turmoil within the system. A Florida newspaper recently suggested the commercial networks could make a killing by running a

By HAROLD JACKSON

soap opera about the tribulations of the public service. Every few months the public stations have to run a campaign to raise funds from their audience and they make their target only after a succession of cliffhanging episodes.

They do get money from the federal government. One of President Ford's few legacies was to give them guaranteed funds over a five-year span. But these accounted for only $156 millions of the $541 millions the stations spent in 1978. The rest is drawn from widely diffused sources — state and local government, charitable foundations, corporations anxious to burnish their image, universities, and local subscribers.

One of the ominous developments last year was that donations from the big foundations dropped by 20 per cent and corporate offerings barely kept pace with inflation.

The Corporation for Public Broadcasting — the body through which federal funds are channelled — recently set up a commission to study the future of the system. At the heart of its report was a call to double the PBS budget to $1,000 millions by 1985. To raise the funds to meet this increase it suggested that the commercial stations should be charged for their use of the air waves.

As the infighting got under way on a bill currently grinding through Congress under the pallidly innocuous title of HR 3333, those provisions affecting PBS were soon watered down by its sponsors.

The commercial networks were still to be charged a "spectrum fee" for their use of the air waves but the amount had been halved, to raise a mere $150 millions a year. There is also no written-in guarantee that this money would go to PBS. Instead, it would simply disappear into the treasury maw to be dolled out as the administration feels inclined. This had not only financial implications but it failed to remove the element the independent commission was most concerned about — the dependence of the public system on political whim.

To offset this reduction, however, the bill proposed to replace the Corporation for Public Broadcasting with a body called the Endowment for Program Development which will have a guaranteed income of $1.50 for every man, woman, and child resident in the U.S. — about $330 millions as the population now stands. (Unintentionally but ironically this would give PBS activists, who tend to be on the Left, a sudden reason to oppose birth control and abortion.)

But the most sinister move of all was the clause that would permit Public Broadcasting stations to devote up to three per cent of their air time to advertisements. This, it is argued, would allow each station to become more self-sustaining but the idea was the same as deciding there is a convenient little corner of Rome to get up a gambling hell called Las Vatican.

Chinese workers losing faith in economic cures

By JAY MATHEWS
The Washington Post

PEKING - The factory worker, in his early 30s, stared at the foreigner who had asked about China's new government.

"I made $27 under Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping). What's the difference?" he asks.

Three years after the fall of the dogmatic "Gang" and official pledges of a more prosperous life, many of China's 960 million people are beginning to doubt the new promises and their government's ability to resolve old difficulties. Conversations with dozens of Chinese and foreigners with unusual access to Chinese, suggest a desire on the part of individual Chinese to look out for themselves and ignore the slogans of sacrifice that have ruled Chinese life for three decades.

Bonuses

After a burst of renewed interest in work, and promises of bonuses, following the defeat of the dogmatic Maoists in the leadership in 1976, some factory managers are beginning to complain again of worker absenteeism. Younger Chinese say they are questioning what they get for working harder as inflation, a brand new phenomenon, begins to eat into their occasional wage increases.

"Never before since 1949 have we had such open materialism in this country," said one longtime European resident who has talked to many workers. If effectively used, he added, the new mood could lead to new economic strength. Yet it also has increased the amount of open cynicism and personal ambition and shaken the loyalty and discipline of some of the society's most favored citizens.

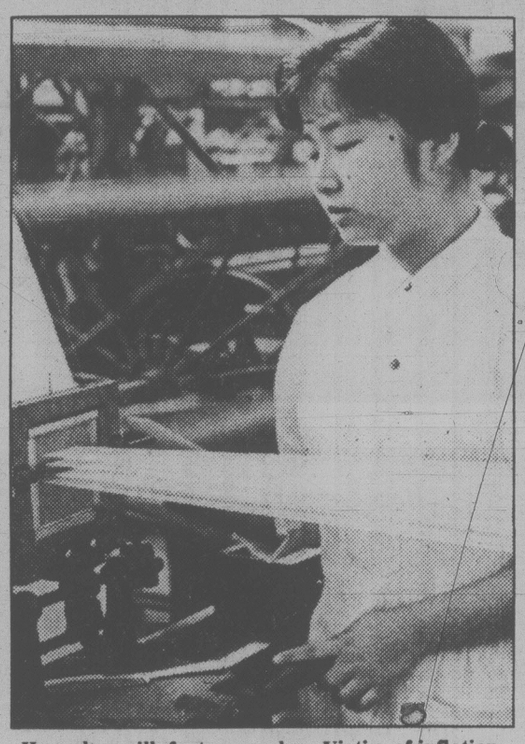

"Long live the Communist Party. Do you believe that?" one young party member said with a smirk, after a foreign acquaintance had closed the hotel-room door. The man's parents were factory workers and party members, usually considered beyond reproach. He had worked hard during long years in the countryside and been admitted to the party at an unusually young age, 22.

Now, four years later, he has a good job and the confidence to talk about his own doubts.

"When I read the newspapers, I am confident," he said, referring to the continual claims of economic and social progress in the official press. "But when I turn and face reality, well . . .

"The future economic plan looks encouraging, but half the people I know don't believe in it. We consider ourselves lucky to get from one year to the next."

It is impossible to tell how deeply worried the Chinese are about their own futures and how widespread their doubts are. Chinese who talk to foreigners are almost all city dwellers, but say they are expressing feelings found in the countryside, particularly among millions of urban youth who have spent long years at farm labor. Most still express some hope that their worries will be resolved and they are proud of China's diplomatic advances. Yet they say they are discouraged that the sweeping economic changes promised after 1976 have not come.

Hangchow silk factory worker: Victim of inflation

"A lot of them say that as China has managed to muddle through for 4,000 years, it should be able to continue to do so," said one foreign businessman here with unusual access to ordinary Chinese citizens. "They say 'It's day-to-day; I'll get my piece of the action.' "

"The job I've got now is fine," said the young Communist in the Shanghai hotel room. "Any job you get in the city is a good job, considering all the people who still have to work on the farms."

An official government tour guide in Chongqing grilled a foreign journalist on what he called the most "prestigious" Western careers, an unusual interest in a country where no form of labor is supposed to have more status than another.

The young man was the son of an army officer. He was part of the elite structure in China that appears to give many of its young members unusual confidence in dealing with foreigners. "I'd really like something with a little more status than tour guide," he said. "I would like to study to be a journalist."

Much of the expressed discontent appears to reflect rising expectations, as the government goes into its second year of promising major wage boosts to urban workers and begins a significant effort to increase peasant income.

Forty per cent of urban workers and office staff have still been denied any general wage increase over the last several years, however.

Communist Party Chairman Hua Guofeng, at the recent National People's Congress, acknowledged that prices would be rising. He neglected to confront in his remarks the disappointment and to some extent embarrassment, this development has produced. Copies of an official Peking pamphlet, Why China Has No Inflation, once widely sold can no longer be found here.

Vagrants

One reason why hundreds of wall posters and thousands of vagrants are still seen in Peking is that many people who feel they were wronged during the Cultural Revolution are vehemently demanding government compensation.

Their stories turn up everywhere. A plastic surgeon, Dr. Hu Qimin, was assigned to serve as interpreter for visiting U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. because of Hu's excellent, American-accented English, acquired during study in the United States. Hu confided to people travelling with Califano, however, that his real job was still running a 90-bed hospital in remote Ningxia, where there was little call for his talent for plastic surgery.

His father had come under such heavy criticism during the Cultural Revolution that the older man reportedly committed suicide. Hu, exiled to his remote post in that same period, told people privately last week that he was still very unhappy there and wished he could be transferred to a large city.

Many specialists like Dr. Hu have been returned to their old posts but indicate a fortified disdain for the Communist Party that come from having little left to lose.

"Some of them have said to me, 'What can they do to me, when I've been cleaning toilets for 10 years,' " a foreign engineer said.

The party's reputation has declined generally — something the official press openly acknowledges — "simply because it has allowed so many terrible things to happen over the last few years," one young Communist said.

A factory technician complained to a foreign acquaintance that his superiors did not seem to want to listen to ideas he had for improving production. They were stymied by timidity and general incompetence, he said.

"But after the Gang of Four, didn't they remove incompetent managers from many factories?" the acquaintance asked.

"Yes," the technician replied, "and they were transferred to supervise other factories and messed those up."

A diplomat here said, "This leads to a chip-on-the-shoulder attitude: 'Raise my salary 30 per cent and I'll work harder.' They're raising salaries some, raising prices, too, borrowing on the future, and if production goes up then it will help them."

Changes

Yet after several changes of policy on bonuses in the last few months, many Chinese say they are not sure that Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping, advocate of the wage increases, can bring off his economic miracle.

With the prices going up, said one Chinese student, "my salary ($35) is enough for me — I'm single — but not enough to take my girlfriend out to a restaurant very often, for a happy weekend.

Cyprus solution looks dim

NICOSIA — The recent breakdown of inter-communal talks in Cyprus is a tragedy.

The negotiations are regarded as the last chance of a peaceful solution: If they fail, the de facto partition that has existed in the five years since the Turkish invasion will become permanent.

In May, it was agreed that the talks were being "carried out in a continuing and sustained manner, avoiding any delay." Instead, both sides appear to have gone to the conference table as intransigent as ever and merely restated old positions.

One of the main stumbling blocks was the Turkish refusal to put at the top of the agenda the Greek resettlement of the deserted Famagustan suburb of Varosha, now under Turkish military control.

According to Item Five of the May agreement between President Spiros Kyprianou and Turkish Cypriot leader Ralph Denktash "priority will be given to reaching resettlement of Varosha under UN auspices simultaneously with the beginning of the consideration . . . of the constitutional and territorial aspects of a comprehensive settlement."

May's 10-point agreement between the two leaders, hailed as a major breakthrough at the time, has since been described as a masterpiece of ambiguity. One Greek Cypriot lawyer pointed out that you could drive a tank through Item Five, which can be made to mean that the Turks will think about returning Varosha once the Greeks have made major territorial and constitutional concessions.

At the moment 25,000 Turkish troops hold about 38 per cent of the island for the Turkish Cypriots, who are a fifth of the total population. The negotiations are intended to establish a bi-communal federal republic. There seems little doubt that this time the Turkish Cypriots adopted a tougher attitude than they did last year, when at one point they practically seemed to be offering Varosha for free as long as the Greeks agreed to talk. The motives for this more hard-line stance appear to come from both strength and weakness.

By COLIN SMITH
The Observer

For a start it should be made plain that the Greek Cypriots are not really negotiating with the Turkish Cypriots. They are dealing directly with Turkey, although Prime Minister Ecevit is always careful to channel all negotiations through Denktash and his Turkish federated state.

Nor is Denktash, who many think would dearly love to make a unilateral declaration of independence for his tiny kingdom, entirely a puppet. But in the end he does what he's told because he needs the Turkish army rather more than they need him.

Turkey has two new cards since last year.

The first is the Iranian upheaval, which means that the United States is more than ever in need of monitoring bases in Turkey and overflying rights to see that the Russians are keeping their end of the SALT agreement.

The second is that the Soviets appear to be drawing away from their previous line of being totally pro-Greek Cypriot. A state visit to Moscow by President Kyprianou was recently cancelled and AKEL, the powerful Moscow-line Greek Cypriot Communist Party, whose support practically keeps Kyprianou afloat, exerted some pressure on him to go to the talks.

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon said last week Canada should consider withdrawing from its Cyprus peacekeeping commitment.

The Soviets want a swift settlement of the Cyprus problem as they fear it might end up permanently divided between two NATO countries — Greece and Turkey. Once there was a settlement they would then fan the flames of their campaign, already smouldering, for the removal of the two British bases.

Turkey's weakness is, of course, its chaotic economic and political plight. Although, at first glance, this would appear to make it eager to settle at almost any cost, this argument does not take into account the mood of the only really stable institution in the country: the army.

The Turkish army shed blood for Cyprus — a lot more than they expected to — and they are reluctant to give up a square metre of it unless they are certain their withdrawal will win major benefits for Turkey.

On the Greek side the main problem is that, since the death of Archbishop Makarios, there is just no politician around with the stature to make major conessions, even if he wanted to, and survive politically. This is not the fault of Kyprianou. It is simply that to succeed the founder of this state is a difficult act to follow.

In many ways Cypriots are as trapped by their history as the Irish. They would like to learn to live together again, but the temptation to rake up the past, whether recent or ancient, often proves irresistible.

During the last five years of partition the polarization of the two communities has become even more desperate. The only place on the island where Greeks and Turks still work together is the eastern British base at Dhekelia, which employs 926 civilians, of whom 286 are Turks. Their jobs range from senior administators to clerks, drivers, telephonists, typists and policemen.

Synthetic fuel impact at least 10 years away

By STUART DIAMOND
Newsday

NEW YORK - The multi-billion dollar crash program envisioned by the Carter administration and Congress to produce synthetic gasoline and natural gas, chiefly from coal, would have no significant impact on the United States' energy supply for at least 10 years, most experts agree.

At the same time, even supporters of the program acknowledge it raises many environmental problems, such as the production of cancer-causing agents and major water requirements in the water-short West. The program's opponents contend that spending the same amount of money on such measures as conservation and solar energy research would reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil much more quickly and easily.

Moreover, major oil companies, which have clamored for less government regulation and subsidies, say they will not build synthetic fuels plants without government subsidies because the economics are so uncertain.

A barrel of synthetic fuel costs about $25, compared with $20 per barrel for imported oil. The price of the synthetic fuels, moreover, has been rising from about $15-$17 per barrel five years ago.

Some experts question whether synthetic fuels will be cheaper than imported energy in the near future, particularly since the estimated cost of a major synthetic fuel plant, capable of producing 100,000 barrels of oil per day, is $1 billion to $1.5 billion and rising.

"This synthetics plan is being railroaded through like crazy behind the so-called shortage scare," said Edwin Rothschild, research director of Energy Action, a Washington, D.C-based consumer group. "We will be underwriting the very companies that are raising oil prices. If there is a serious economic advantage in 'synfuels,' oil companies would put all their own money into it."

Three years ago, the House of Representatives defeated a similar proposal, which would have provided an initial $4 billion in loan guarantees for plants to convert coal, oil shale and other materials into a substitute for oil, gasoline, alcohol or gas for cooking and heating. At that time, the General Accounting Office, the congressional watchdog agency, said the program was simply too expensive and the products more costly than imported oil.

Since then, federal energy officials have been proceeding with a more modest program, this year about $500 million. A number of pilot plants are testing a variety of technologies, using steam, catalysts or solvents to convert coal and other materials into synthetic fuels.

But the long lines at gasoline stations and the skyrocketing price of foreign oil have led Congress and the Carter administration to resurrect the synthetic fuels crash program. On June 26, the House approved a raft of synthetic fuels subsidies that would provide private industry perhaps $9 billion extra over the next decade to build synthetic fuel plants.

Even the most ambitious of these programs would result in replacement of less than 10 per cent of the nation's oil imports by 1985, though, and only about 50 per cent by 1990, experts say.

"The technology is really not ready to go, from an environmental point of view," said one highly placed energy official in the Carter administration, who requested anonymmity.

In theory, the synthetic fuels seem quite attractive. Coal, the principal raw material for synthetic fuels, is so plentiful in the U.S. that it could meet all domestic oil and gas needs for decades. And, locked in the shale of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming is more oil than the known Saudi Arabian reserves - enough to meet all U.S. needs for a century at the current rate of use.

Moreover, domestic garbage and crops could be processed to produce alcohol, which could burn cleanly in today's cars with slight modifications. A combination of gasoline and alcohol -gasohol - is being sold at an increasing number of service stations.

The first decomposition of coal into gas was accomplished in 1790, by using a jet steam. In the Second World War, Germany ran its airplanes on oil synthesized from coal. In 1944, the U.S. Congress passed the Synthetic Liquid Fuels Act, which provided $60 million in research funds until the program expired in 1955. The simplest gas-to-coal process involves crushing the coal and subjecting it to steam at high temperatures (up to 3,500 degrees), producing a low-quality gas which can be economically used only near the plant.

One pilot plant producing low-quality gas has been completed in Windsor, Conn., during the past year by Combustion Engineering. Two-thirds of its cost of $25 million has been funded by the federal government. Further processing can bring the gas to pipeline quality for household use but cost estimates for this gas - about $4 per thousand cubic feet - are more than twice the price of current natural gas.

In congressional testimony last month, John M. Deutch, head of the energy technologies branch of the U.S. Energy Department, said that new coal-based synthetic fuels projects would not produce their first gallons until late 1986, at the earliest. Between now and then, the price of imported oil may more than double, if current trends continue. This year alone, imported oil will cost Americans an estimated $60 billion.

Hydro breakup studied by gov't

The provincial government is studying the feasibility of breaking up B.C. Hydro into several companies as recommended by the committee on Crown corporations.

Dividing Hydro into autonomous subsidiary companies could be beneficial to taxpayers, Energy Minister Jim Hewitt said Tuesday, but a decision will not be made until the recommendations have been reviewed.

Chairman Jack Kempf (SC — Omenica) said the committee will continue to pressure the government to divide Hydro into subsidiary companies responsible for construction, electrical sales, gas distribution and administrative services.

Under the proposal, Hydro would remain a non-operating holding company and financial agent. Each subsidiary would have its own management.

"We have a very strong mandate, a very strong piece of legislation under which we operate," Kempf said.

"And I don't think the premier of this province would have brought in that kind of legislation had he not intended to take the recommendations of that committee as being valid."

Premier Bill Benpett frequently has said Hydro is too big and has indicated he would support a reduction in its size.

Hewitt said in an interview the setting up of a natural gas utility separate from the electricity division would provide better competition.

He noted, however, that new administrations, equipment and buildings would be needed "so you weigh the cost of that as opposed to the benefits you would get from having separate units."

"We have an ample supply of natural gas and we could promote more use of it as an alternative to oil, and that being the case a separate entity for the gas division could make them more aggressive in the marketplace promoting their product."

The government already has moved to remove transit from Hydro with establishment of the Urban Transit Authority and a bill setting up the Metro Transit Operating Co.

Hydro lost $61 million on transit operations last year and expects to lose about $64 million this year.

However, Hewitt was unable to say if removal of this annual loss would result in lower electricity bills. The loss was offset by export sale of power which totalled $33 million last year.

"I don't think you would see a reduction in the electric bill but you might see a lower rate of increase due to increases of inflation on their operation."

Inmate-patient change after girl assaulted

Procedures for sending prisoners to hospitals are being changed following an incident at the Burnaby General in which an eight-year-old girl was assaulted by a convicted sex offender, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Tuesday.

Hospital officials said last week they were not informed that a 17-year-old sex offender, transferred from the New Haven Correctional Institute, was a patient in the children's ward until the girl was assaulted.

Police said the child was not physically injured in the attack which took place while she was visiting her brother in hospital.

The youth "lured her into another room but before he could do anything she became frightened and screamed," a spokesman said. "He throttled, her then let her go."

Gardom said hospital officials did not ask about the boy's background when he was transferred to hospital suffering from acute appendicitis.

His escort was not aware of his background and the staff member who issued the medical absence certificate releasing him to Burnaby General did not have his file readily available, he said.

Gardom said the changes in procedure will ensure that everyone concerned will be aware of the nature of the offense of any prisoner that is being sent to hospital.

Multiplex 'stampede' ruled out

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said Tuesday he will not be stampeded into making a quick decision on the proposed $175 million Multiplex for Vancouver.

Directors of the Pacific National Exhibition met with the Social Credit caucus to outline the proposal and ask the government to contribute $58 million for the multi-purpose complex.

PNE president Erwin Swangard said estimates for the project had increased to $175.4 million from $163.5 million in one year because of "delays in the construction flow schedule."

If the schedule does not start by Aug. 1, he said, cost of the project will accelerate at $45,000 a day.

Curtis said a decision will not be made by the Aug. 1 deadline because there are many factors still to be taken into account.

"I would not want to see us stampeded or rushed into a decision by which the people of B.C. will have to live with for a long time," he said.

The legislature already has approved spending $25 million for a sports stadium in the Vancouver area and the federal government is committed to $35 million, about one-third of the cost for the stadium component.

The PNE wants the $25 million, an additional $23 million and an advance of $6.6 million to complete studies so the project can be started by April 1, 1980, at the latest.

Following the meeting, the delgation expressed concern about the lack of enthusiasm shown by the caucus.

The brief presented to the caucus said the multiplex involves replacement of outmoded, rapidly deteriorating and already condemned facilities and provides a replacement for Empire Stadium.

The brief said the stadium has at best three years left, costs $200,000 a year to maintain and is sinking at the south end.

Golden find on seashore nets $16,700

LONDON (AP) — Kay Creasey went gathering seashells last October and picked up a 1,000-year-old gold bracelet that netted her £6,500 ($16,700) at auction Tuesday. The bracelet, probably lost by a Viking, is four ounces of 99-per-cent gold and is dated from the ninth to 10th century. Mrs. Creasey, 29, made her small fortune in 85 seconds as the bracelet was sold at Sotheby's to a London dealer.

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday and Sunday and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Mine strikers tighten screws

FRASER LAKE (UPC) — Striking union employees at Placer Development Ltd.'s Endako molybdenum mine threatened to increase picketing at other company operations Tuesday to force settlement of their five-month labor dispute.

"We're going to shut as many places down as we can," said a spokesman for the 500-member local of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers.

The union spokesman said members would not return to work unless the company agrees to waive disciplinary action against 11 employees suspected of violent incidents on the picket line. The company rejected the proposal earlier.

The company agreed to the union's other key demand for an additional 15-cent-an-hour increase Jan. 1, 1981. The Ladner report had recommended a 30 percent wage increase over the two-year agreement.

Shot bear wandering around?

PORT COQUITLAM (CP) — A black bear shot by RCMP might still be wandering around this suburb and could be highly dangerous, a provincial fish and wildlife spokesman said Tuesday.

A search for the animal continued, and parents were warned to keep children indoors.

The bear was shot Sunday after being spotted walking through a residential area, police said. The 250-pound animal was hit by a rifle shot but escaped.

Vancouver climber dies in fall

CALGARY (CP) — A Vancouver mountain climber died Monday in a 300-metre fall when he was coming back down Mount Assiniboine after scaling the 3,700-metre peak.

Police did not release the man's name.

The man was sliding down a snow patch when he lost control and fell.

In a separate incident, another climber suffered broken ribs and bruises in a 30-metre fall down Mount Louis when a rock broke loose. A safety rope broke the fall.

Hospital escaper caught

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Dennis Paul Boivin, 27, who escaped Sunday night from Riverview Hospital in Coquitlam, was taken into custody by RCMP Tuesday.

Boivin had been held at the mental institution since 1975 after being charged with breaking and entering.

Breath test champion fined $300

TERRACE (CP) — A Terrace man who registered five times the legal blood alcohol limit in three breath analysis tests has been fined $300 and placed on probation for six months after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Court was told that Daniel Viveiros, 46, registered readings of .39 and .41 when he was given breath analysis tests on June 15. He was arrested by RCMP after being found asleep behind the wheel of a parked car.

Crown counsel Jeff Arndt said Viveiros was examined in hospital then released but was arrested again the next day when the car he was driving hit a power pole.

Second judge delays ruling

VANCOUVER (CP) — A second provincial court judge has refused to hear cases under the new British Columbia Family Relations Act on grounds that decisions on some of its provisions are the prerogative of federal judges.

Winnifred Murphy, a retired family court judge in suburban Richmond, said in an interview that she adjourned several such cases after a disputed ruling on the act by Judge Phil Govan in the same court.

Judge Govan's ruling in April brought a complaint in the legislature last week that deputy-attorney-general Richard Vogel tried to have him removed from the case concerned.

Vogel denied the charge. He said Govan misinterpreted telephone calls made in connection with an application to the B.C. Supreme Court to compel Govan to hear the case concerned.

The order was subsequently granted, but in the meantime the case had been withdrawn by the plaintiff, so the constitutional question raised by Govan remains unanswered.

Judge Murphy said Monday that Govan was relieving her on the Richmond bench when he made the controversial ruling.

She returned shortly after and adjourned cases that came under a section of the act that purports to give provincial judges broad powers to deal with lump-sum settlement of maintenance and the right to sell the family home.

Although provincial court judges are not bound by the decisions of their peers, Murphy said she partly agreed with Judge Govan.

Unlike Govan, Judge Murphy said she thinks the legislature was within its jurisdiction in its Family Relations Act on the issues of custody of children, access to them, maintenance for wives and children and occupation of the family residence.

But she agreed with Judge Govan that judgments on lump-sum settlements and home sales are reserved to federal judges.

"I just kept adjourning any that were controversial points and waiting for the appeal," she said.

The judgment has not been formally appealed but she suggested the provincial government could solve the problem by having the federal government elevate family court judges to county court.

B.C. taken to cleaners over Columbia: NDP

The massive final price-tag for Columbia River Hydro projects proves conclusively that U.S. negotiators took B.C. to the cleaners financially, an NDP MLA said Tuesday.

Chris D'Arcy (Rossland-Trail) noted that the cost of building the river system's three dams alone exceeded the U.S. contribution. When the cost of the generating and transmission system at the Mica dam is added the shortfall is even greater.

B.C. received $480 million from the U.S. to cover the costs although the total for the High Arrow, Duncan and Mica dams eventually topped $600 million — a shortfall of some $120 million.

The cost of generators and transmission facilities at Mica added an extra $675 million to the final price-tag.

Duncan and Arrow projects are storage dams only.

The U.S. hydro systems have first priority on storage water so B.C. lost the ability to control its own rivers, a very serious error if there is ever a serious drought, D'Arcy said.

The final costs were tabled in the legislature Monday by Energy Minister and B.C. Hydro director Jim Hewitt in response to questions from D'Arcy.

Illegal roadblock now legal

A Penticton gun club which illegally tried to keep people away from surrounding property now has a government-issued permit guaranteeing it total privacy, the NDP charged Tuesday.

Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) noted the club was so adamant about preventing people from using an adjacent public access road that at one time a local youth was shot and seriously wounded by an over-zealous caretaker at the club.

Yet while a civil suit arising from the incident was still in progress, the lands branch of the provincial government approved a lease change application giving the Penticton Fish, Game and Rifle Club exclusive use of the public right-of-way.

Pointing out that Energy Minister Jim Hewitt's constituency secretary is a member of the board of directors of the club, Macdonald wanted to know why the government took the side of the club in extending the leasehold.

Lands Minister Jim Chabot said he would take the question as notice.

The gun club tried to keep people off the public road which led up to a popular hiking and motorcycle trail by posting notices and building a dirt barrier on the road.

At one time the lands branch warned the club to remove the signs and obstacles. Two years ago four young Penticton motorcyclists were using the access road to get to the old wagon trail when, from about 15 feet away, the caretaker shot one of the youths.

The caretaker was eventually convicted of criminal negligence in the use of a firearm.

But while a civil suit was in progress, the club was given the right to block the road via the amended lease.

A hole to call home

PARKSVILLE (UPC) — A visit to Frank Wissemann's home means one does not get to see the stars unless one happens by the south side of the dwelling.

Wissemann's home is not your traditional house. It is buried on three sides under tons of soil to use the earth's natural warmth for heating.

Wissemann, who designed and is building the six-room home, says it will protect its occupants against nuclear fallout and will be standing 2,000 years from now. He claims it is the first of its kind.

The most attractive feature of the home, however, is its $30,000 price tag which, Wissemann claims, is some $10,000 less than a conventional six-room dwelling would cost in the Qualicum-Parksville area of Vancouver Island, about 150 miles north of Victoria.

The floors, walls and roof of the house are all constructed of reinforced concrete so they can support the tons of earth which bury them.

A greenhouse will be built along the length of the south wall to provide solar heating as well as for growing vegetables and tropical plants.

Wissemann, a mechanical contractor who has been building homes in Qualicum-Parksville for 10 years, calls his new home, scheduled to be completed in June, "an earth-sheltered solar house." He said he got the idea from reading press and magazine reports on homes using solar energy for heating.

"Heat is always in the earth, and by using earth against the walls and on the roof to the depth of three feet, it will insulate the house," he said.

"The year-round inside temperature will remain between 55 and 60 degress, even if no heating is provided," Wissemann said, adding that extra heat can be provided by passive solar heating from the greenhouse.

Wissemann said the adjoining wall between the house and the greenhouse will have two sliding glass doors, allowing heat from the greenhouse to pass easily into the home.

"In the winter, when the sun is lower in the sky, it will be able to shine right through the greenhouse and the sliding doors and strike an eight-inch thick reinforced concrete wall at the back of the living room," he said.

He said the wall will thus be heated and when the sun goes down, will give off heat slowly, keeping up the temperature of the house. The roof will overhang the south wall to prevent the high summer sun striking the sliding glass doors and causing excessive heat.

"The large expanse of glass on the greenhouse, which will be 12 feet wide by 12 feet high and 36 inches long, will allow a lot of heat to escape at night," Wissemann added.

He said to prevent this he will build shutters which will be closed automatically at the command of photo-electric cells.

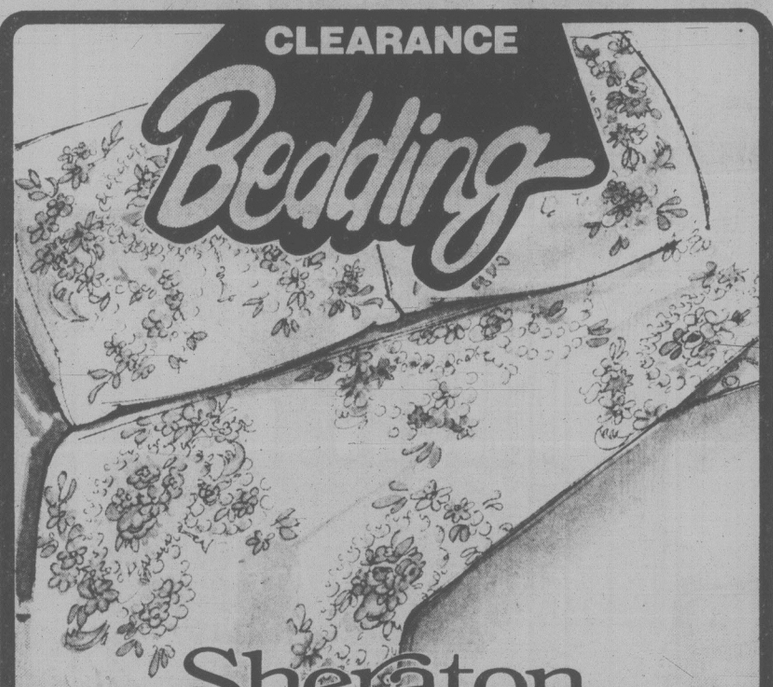

He said grass will be sown over the soil to prevent erosion and for appearance's sake.

"I hope to have a sundeck on top, but the whole idea of the house is designed so as not to waste space. We will have two bedrooms," but there will be no hallways. The house will have normal amenities.

One of the possible drawbacks is the fact both bedrooms will be without windows. The only windows in the house will be on the south side.

Action taken on site safety

The Canadian Union of Public Employees and Saanich have agreed to work together to improve excavation site safety standards.

The decision, taken at a regular labor-management meeting Tuesday, comes after a mishap at Sims and Seaton last Thursday when a 59-year-old municipal employee was buried to his shoulders when an excavation wall caved in.

Merv Clayton is in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The municipality agreed to underwrite costs of sending six union members and three management representatives to Vancouver next Tuesday to study safety standards at construction sites.

Union local president Maureen Nuttall said Workers' Compensation Board safety standards have not always been met in Saanich.

Strike cuts off B.C. communities

Communities along Highway 37 in northern B.C. between Stewart and the Yukon border are in a virtual state of siege because of a strike by local truckers, the MLA for the area said Tuesday.

Al Passarell (NDP — Atlin) said no food or fuel has been delivered to the communities along the 800-kilometre stretch of highway since Teamsters in the area went on strike Monday to express their concern over road conditions.

"The communities are cut off because there are no aircraft up there," Passarell said. "They have to depend on the trucks. They're stuck.

"It's not like a labor dispute here where people are not isolated. Here there is still radio, there is still airplanes and it is still possible to drive out. There, there is nothing."

Passarell said pickets went up after three of the 29 truckers employed by Arrow Transport Ltd. were seriously injured along the 500-kilometre stretch between Stewart and Cassiar.

Arrow Transport delivers fuel to Cassiar where it then picks up asbestos for delivery to Stewart.

The truckers said increased tourist traffic on the highway plus frost heaves and thick dust have created dangerous driving conditions.

Passarell said drivers for other firms also are refusing to travel along the route north of Terrace.

Cassiar is running out of fuel as a result of the job action, he said. "In another 48 hours they will have to close everything down — the townsite as well as the mill.

"This has been going on for years and the guys finally got fed up and decided they couldn't take it any more."

It is affecting the tourist business as well, he said, and people in Terrace are telling travellers not to use the highway.

"It's going to be like the moccasin telegraph," he said. "It's going to go right down the line and there won't be any tourists that will want to go up into northern B.C.

"Remember the season is short. It starts to snow in September so basically there is only July and August."

He said the lone shopkeeper and motel operator at Dease Lake told him Tuesday that no cars had come through since the pickets went up.

Passarell said he talked to Highways Minister Alex Fraser about the problems two weeks ago without success. He asked Labor Minister Allan Williams to intervene on Tuesday.

Williams said in an interview he would not get involved in the dispute which he classified as an illegal strike.

He said he understood senior company officials were meeting with the Teamsters in efforts to resolve the dispute.

Fraser said he would not get involved in the dispute.

"I am familiar with every rock on the road, but I'm not familiar with the labor dispute and I don't intend to be," Fraser said.

He said the government had spent $80 million upgrading the route since 1976 but more needs to be spent since only 40 kilometres of the 750-kilometre route is paved.

He noted that Arrow Transport had discussed the matter thoroughly with his ministry before agreeing to haul fuel and asbestos between Stewart and Cassiar.

"They were fully aware of what they were getting into. The company went into it with their eyes wide open. They were fully aware of the conditions."

Long land claim fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For three generations the Cow Creek Indians of Oregon have been trying to fight a battle for their land in a courtroom.

For more than 50 years they have been seeking permission to go to court to argue that their ancestors were cheated by the government when they signed a treaty in 1853.

Under the treaty, the Indians were to get $12,000 for 800 square miles of land — a little more than 2 cents an acre — and a small reservation. Their descendants say only $1,000 was paid and they never got the reservation.

A 1946 law says no court may hear an Indian claim arising before 1947 if it was not presented to the Indian Claims Commission by 1951. But Oregon lawmakers have introduced bills to exempt the Cow Creeks so they may file suit in the U.S. Court of Claims.

Chairman John Melcher (Dem-Mont.) of the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs says the Indians have suffered "obvious injustices."

Last week, Melcher's committee and the House Interior Committee held a joint hearing on the bills.

Forrest Gerard, assistant secretary for Indian affairs in the Interior Department, told the committee since the Indians are now armed with new documents obtained through the Freedom of Information Act to back their claim, it has become "far more complex and of a far larger magnitude than we had originally believed."

"Until we have had the time to evaluate this new information," he said, "we do not favor passage of the legislation."

Also appearing in behalf of the Indians was Stephen Dow Beckham, associate professor of history at Lewis and Clark College. He said the descendants of those Indians have labored long for an opportunity to tell how the lands were taken.

"As a person very familiar with the course of American Indian history, I strongly feel that this case is one demanding action," he said. "I urge you to approve this proposed legislation and permit these people to have their day in court."

The Indians listened patiently. To them it was an old story.

"To the government, we were truly a forgotten people," testified Tribal Council President Ellis Buschmann.

The tribe almost made it in 1932, only to be stymied by President Herbert Hoover.

From 1924 to 1932, the Cow Creeks, with the help of Oregon members of Congress, tried five times to win passage of legislation to let them sue the government.

In 1932, they almost won.

Both houses of Congress passed the bill, but Hoover vetoed it. The nation was in the grip of the Great Depression, and Hoover explained the country could not afford such litigation.

International conspiracy, says Ross' lawyer

Defence counsel in the Tommy Ross Jr. B.C. Supreme Court murder trial in Victoria told the jury Tuesday evidence against the accused points to an international police conspiracy.

Douglas Christie, summing up the case for the accused, was referring specifically to a thumb print, identified by police as Ross', which was found June 10 last year in the Queens Avenue apartment of 26-year-old Janice Forbes, who was found strangled May 14, 1978.

Ross, 20, of Los Angeles, is being tried on a charge of first-degree murder in Forbes' death.

Christie took about 2½ hours to present his case. When he finished Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane began his charge to the jury during which he will canvass various points of law and summarize the case for and against the accused.

The jury is expected to begin deciding on a verdict today.

Christie referred to the fact the thumb print was not found on the handle of a teapot in Forbes' bedroom until nearly a month after she was found murdered.

He said it would have been logical for Sgt. Patrick Braiden, chief of the identification section of Victoria police, to check the print for forgery because there was such a gap between the day he first checked the apartment for prints, May 14, and June 10 when the print was found.

That was not done, he said.

Also, Christie said it seems strange that Braiden didn't see the teapot and check it for prints on May 14 because he testified that on May 14 he picked up a belt which was lying very close to where the teapot was found June 10.

Christie said he was not inferring that Braiden was dishonest.

"But there is something wrong when he doesn't see what they (the police) say was there June 10."

Christie said the Crown's case against Ross depends on the fingerprint and the fingerprint then became the basis for similar fact evidence being introduced from a Port Angeles slaying.

The jury heard evidence that Ross' fingerprint was found in the apartment of Janet Bowcott, 20, on April 24, 1978, the day she was found strangled with her hands bound behind her back and her ankles tied together.

Christie said once evidence in the Port Angeles case was admitted, the trial became an international case with some serious discrepancies.

He said there is something definitely wrong in the Crown's case and he added he would label it an international conspiracy.

"I wouldn't suggest these things lightly but if you look at the evidence," Christie said, there is no other conclusion to be drawn.

Christie also alluded to a visit by Victoria police to Bellingham in late May last year or early June to get prints of Ross and other items of identification.

Yet, he said, Ross' prints were already available to Braiden.

The difference then is that the reason the police went to Bellingham was to get original prints that could be transferred and used in the Forbes' case, Christie said.

"There's something definitely wrong."

He said the Crown's case swings on "suspect circumstantial evidence and fingerprints. Without the fingerprints there would be nothing."

Christie said the evidence from the Port Angeles case "if it had stood alone, would not have properly hung a dog but it is introduced here to hang a man on another matter.

"It is absolutely incredible what has happened in this case."

He dismissed the Port Angeles evidence as "an incredible array of basically insignificant facts."

Christie told the jury that Ross is presumed innocent until the Crown proves his guilt beyond any reasonable doubt.

Before the judge

The 32-year-old victim in a June 18 police shooting in Central Saanich appeared in provincial court Tuesday.

John James Pilatzke, 5433 Densmore, was formally charged with breaking and entering Fay's Brentwood Dry Cleaners, 7183 West Saanich, and possession of a weapon, a file.

Pilatzke was jointly charged with 23-year-old Robert Woolcock, 3459 Plymouth, and 24-year-old Lori Ami Still, of 2549 Dowler and 3134 Alder, in connection with the break-in.

Constable Neil Laing fired three shots during the investigation of a break-in at the dry cleaning premises.

Woolcock and Still appeared in court June 19 but Pilatzke was unable to appear until Tuesday because he was in hospital.

Judge Fred Green remanded Pilatzke until today when the co-accused return to court for possible election of trial method.

A Nanaimo driver who sent five persons to hospital with minor injuries was given a seven-day jail term and fined $175.

Steven James Roberts, 250 Victoria, pleaded guilty to driving while under suspension and driving without due care and attention.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Roberts drove through a red light at Johnson and Fernwood about 8 p.m. June 25. A car proceeding through a green light on Fernwood was struck and five persons were injured.

Laughton said Roberts jumped out of his car and ran away but his sister, a passenger in his vehicle, stayed at the scene.

Roberts was convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 in March at Ladysmith and was suspended from driving on March 15, the suspension to last until Sept. 15.

Roberts said he was taking penicillin and pills at the time and was not familiar with Victoria streets.

Green handed out the jail term for the driving while suspended and the fine for careless driving.

A two-day jail term was handed a 26-year-old man who appeared to be intoxicated when he first appeared before Green in the morning.

Robert Stanley Taylor, 1008 Hillside, pleaded guilty to wilful damage and was remanded in custody until the afternoon to see if his condition would improve.

Laughton said Taylor left the Colony Inn beer parlor in the late afternoon of June 26 and was walking up Hillside when he tore off a vent window from a car parked in front of 766 Hillside. Taylor climbed into the car but got out when questioned by the owner.

Taylor told the judge he "just wanted to sit down and rest."

"I was loaded," he said.

Improved facilities for training urged

Upgrading of nurse training facilities has been urged for Camosun College, the University of Victoria and the University of B.C. in a report prepared for the provincial government.

It recommends that hospital-based training be phased out. Both the Royal Jubilee and Victoria General have already begun a phase-out program although Vancouver General still conducts nurse training.

The report, prepared by nursing consultant Claire Kermacks of Vancouver, is being studied by officials in both the health and education ministries.

Her report suggests nurses should be in five categories rather than the present three.

The present practical nurses should be redesignated as nursing assistants and general nursing should be separated into three levels, depending on skills.

The report recommends that UVic begin its masters program in nursing as soon as possible to increase the number of top-level nurses. Only about one per cent have masters degrees or higher.

UVic and UBC should make its courses more available throughout the province.

The distinction between psychiatric and general nurses should be ended because both have about the same skills, the report says.

Nurses should have greater mobility to move up through the ranks through improved education and by acquiring additional skills.

The highest priority in nursing education should be in development of post-clinical courses, especially intensive and coronary, emergency and trauma, long-term, obstetrical, operating room, post-anesthetic and psychiatric care.

"Without doubt the development of post-basic clinical courses is of the highest priority in nursing education in British Columbia. Employers and nurses are desperate," the report concludes.

Hundreds denied grant: MLA

The homeowners' grant — a sacred Socred institution — is being unfairly denied hundreds of B.C. residents, including some in Victoria, Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber said Tuesday.

The grant is denied 99-year leaseholders who failed to register their leases before Dec. 31, 1977.

There are more than 300 long-term leaseholders in Victoria in two large building complexes — Orchard House on Michigan Street and Villa Royale on Haywood — and about another 700 throughout the rest of the province.

Barber said he is uncertain how many of the leaseholders were lucky enough or well enough informed to register their leases or buy them outright before the cut-off date.

But he has an ever-fattening file of local residents whose application for the $380 homeowners' grant has been denied.

Eventually as other people take over the leases through sales or deaths, the list will grow longer until virtually all the 99-year leaseholders will be ineligible for the grant, Barber said.

Development of long-term leasehold properties were popular a few years ago as a tax dodge, but are not common now that the loophole has been closed, Barber said.

Both the NDP and Liberal caucuses pressured the government to extend the homeowners' grant to those leases since they are, for all intents and purposes, individually owned homes, he said.

The government finally agreed and amended the Homeowner's Act, but for some reason added the cut-off date, Barber said.

His efforts to have the arbitrary cut-off removed have failed so far.

"It's stupid and discriminatory," he said. "It's flies in the face of the Social Credit philosophy and creates two classes of homeowner."

It also lowers the re-sale value of the lease units.

Barber tried to raise the issue during debate this week on the amendment bill increasing the homeowners' grant to $380, but was ruled out of order.

10 die in mishap

CAIRO (AP) — Ten persons, including a mother and her five daughters, were killed when their passenger car plunged into a canal near the River Nile delta town of Tanta, the newspaper Al Akhbar reported.

Sally Ann set to call tenders

Tenders for the rebuilding of the Salvation Army's downtown premises are expected to be called Sept. 15, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Captain Bill Merritt said the campaign to raise $3 million for the project at Johnson and Wharf is doing well.

Donations from three corporate contributors are expected to be announced in a few days, permitting the appointment of an architect for the project, he said.

"We hope to start work on or about Oct. 15," Merritt said.

The project includes building a new expanded Harbor Light centre for alcoholics, an area to accommodate transients and a new second-hand store as well as a new chapel, staff and counselling rooms.

Governor-General medal to student

Hiu-ha Chan of Hong Kong was awarded the Governor-General's silver medal for exceptional academic work at Norfolk House School prize-giving exercises held recently.

He also received a $2,000 scholarship to Simon Fraser University, plus book prizes for mathematics and sciences.

Other awards went to Alex Steele-Mortimer and Katarina Hartwig, progress and sportsmanship; Hilary Fletcher, Claire Hambleton and Pam Cowman, service prizes; Lisa Doyle, D.W. Atkins graduate scholarship.

The event also marked the retirment of Mrs. Ruth Williams after 30 years with the school. She was presented with a solid silver tray, dating from the time of William IV.

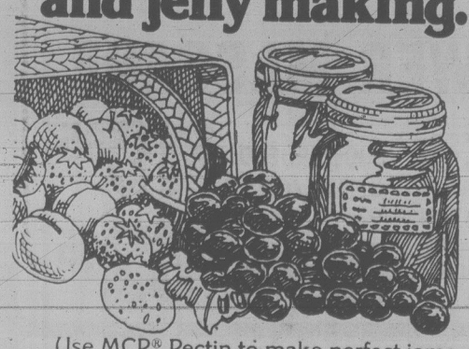

Plumber's torch suspected in fire

City fire officials suspect a spark from a plumber's torch started a fire Tuesday that caused $1,000 damage to a house at 1540 Amphion undergoing renovations.

The fire, spotted by a neighbor at 6:08 p.m., was confined to a wall on the second floor of the house owned by John Freeman.

A fire department spokesman said a plumber had just finished work in the area.

CABLE SLASHED: Vandals cut one of the main cables, causing the collapse of the Lynn Canyon suspension bridge across Lynn Creek in North Vancouver and officials estimated today repairs will cost $2,500. The bridge is expected to remain closed for two weeks.

McKenzie link approval

The $2.4 million first stage of a project to develop McKenzie Avenue into a major highway link was approved Tuesday by Saanich public works committee.

McKenzie will be extended from midway between the Pat Bay Highway and Glanford Avenue on the west to Burnside Road and the Trans-Canada Highway.

Council must approve the final design.

Plans include an overpass over Interurban Road and Colquitz Creek and an intersection at Carey Road. A bridge is planned to span Swan Creek.

Under the cost-sharing agreement with the province Saanich will pay $200,000 toward the provision of sidewalks, curbs and gutters, street lights and storm drains.

Liquor store blamed

The Yates Street liquor store should either be closed early, shut completely, or patrolled by police around the clock to discourage vagrants, say the people working in the area.

In a petition to city hall more than 100 merchants, businessmen and professional people have called for immediate action.

The petition says undesirables are ruining the area.

It requests "either increased foot patrol and police protection on a 24-hour basis or, alternatively, a closing or drastic curtailment of the hours of sale."

The Yates Street and Nootka Court liquor stores recently had their hours of closing set at 9 p.m. rather than the usual 11 p.m. because of an increasing vagrancy problem.

But Yates businessmen don't think the city has gone far enough.

In a covering letter, lawyer George Jones states: "We fully realize the conflicting interests and problems that are besetting council these days. Nevertheless, the situation has gotten completely out of hand and we trust the urgency of this situation will not be overlooked by council. The time has passed for worrying about who is to blame. Action is needed."

Acting Mayor Bill Tindall said today he was not aware of the petition, but it doesn't surprise him.

Tillicum rip-off?

Developers of a shopping centre on the Tillicum outdoor theatre site won't be paying one cent of a $975,000 bill to upgrade the Gorge trunk sewer line, Saanich Ald. John Mika charged during a public works committee meeting Tuesday.

"The ratepayers are being gouged here," said Mika.

He accused some members of council of selling out the regional plan and saddling taxpayers with a million dollar bill for the sake of the Tillicum shopping centre.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said Mika was talking "crap" and making wild allegations without proof.

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren said sewer line must be upgraded to handle the load from increasing high density development in the Gorge area.

Victim identified

A search is continuing for a Seattle man missing and presumed drowned after his eight-metre pleasure boat foundered Monday on rocks near the seaward entrance to Nitinat Lake on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Lake Cowichan RCMP are withholding the man's name but have indentified a woman passenger whose body was washed ashore shortly after the incident.

She was Jennie Barbara Martindale, 45, of Seattle.

Police believe the two were the only persons aboard the boat.

No effort has been made to salvage the vessel which a police spokesman said today is being smashed to pieces by waves.

Baby's death at VGH turned over to lawyer

Victoria police have completed an investigation into the death of a baby born prematurely at Victoria General Hospital last fall to a mentally retarded woman.

City police Insp. Angus Stewart confirmed Tuesday that the case has been referred to regional Crown counsel.

The police investigation began three weeks ago at the request of B.C. Chief Coroner Dr. William McArthur, who first learned of the death two months ago.

McArthur, in an interview Tuesday, said if Crown counsel takes no action he will likely order an inquest.

The baby died 11 hours after it was born to a 33-year-old woman who, authorities say, was severely mentally retarded and living in a Vancouver Island mental institution.

The delivery was by caesarian section and made in the 23rd week of pregnancy.

Medical sources said the woman's pregnancy was not detected until a few days before the operation.

The hospital's abortion committee had turned down a request for an abortion because it has no jurisdiction to authorize abortions beyond the 20th week of pregnancy.

Balloons to go up

More than 800 children are expected to take part in the Great Balloon Race starting next week at Greater Victoria Public Library branches.

Children participating in the library's annual Superkids summer fun program will release helium-filled balloons carrying name tags.

The tags ask people who find the balloons to return them and their tags to the central library, 794 Yates.

The balloons will be released at the following places: Between 10-11 a.m. and 1:30-2:30 p.m., Monday, Esquimalt branch, 1153 Esquimalt Road; 10-11 a.m. and 1:30-2:20 p.m., Tuesday, McClung branch, 3950 Cedar Hill Road; 10-11 and 1:30-2:30 p.m., Wednesday, Central Library, 794 Yates; 10-11 a.m. and 2 p.m., Thursday, Saanich-Victoria branch, 3500 Blanshard; 10-11 a.m. and 1:30-2:30 p.m. Friday, Oak Bay branch, 1442 Monterey.

Lang gets grain firm post

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former Liberal cabinet minister Otto Lang has been named vice-president of Pioneer Grain Co.

Lang, who lost his seat in Parliament in the May 22 federal election, was transport minister and also minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board.

The appointment, announced Wednesday, takes effect August 15.

Pioneer is Canada's largest private grain company, with 440 licensed elevators in the prairies. It's a subsidiary of James Richardson and Sons, Ltd.

Mail in a minute to Europe set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Postal Service, in its biggest step into the electronic age, is inaugurating a mail-via-satellite network that photographs letters and transmits them from Washington or New York to London in less than a minute.

The new computerized INTELPOST this week began a month-long demonstration stage between the United States and England. The Postal Service then plans a one-year field test in which actual mail will be sent between the United States and seven countries.

England, Argentina, Belgium, West Germany, France, Iran and the Netherlands have purchased computer equipment to join in the project in August.

The cost of mailing a letter to Britain will be $5 a page — the rates may be reduced if the system proves profitable — plus additional postage for hand delivery if the sender desires.

The Postal Service, contending the rate is far cheaper than Telex fees, hopes the system will someday be a big moneymaker and time-saver for the public.

INTELPOST has headquarters at newly remodeled, computer-filled rooms in the Postal Service's Washington offices and at the World Trade Centre in New York.

The satellite system works like this:

A person bearing a letter arrives at the post office and fills out a brief form stating his address and the address of the intended recipient.

The postal clerk glances at the letter to make certain the print is dark enough to photocopy. ("We don't want to read the letter," says Jack Funderburk, director of the Postal Service's new Office of International Electronic Message Systems, stressing the importance of protecting individual privacy.)

The clerk adjusts the computer coding and inserts the letter in a scanning machine, which photographs it in black and white and transmits it in digital form to receiving equipment in England.

Within a minute or two, a post office in London receives copies of both the letter and the address form and promptly folds them into a window-envelope that displays the address of the recipient.

Depending on the sender's instructions, the clerk will either hold the mail for the recipient to pick up, drop it into the normal mail stream, or have it delivered as special express mail with an extra charge of a couple of dollars.

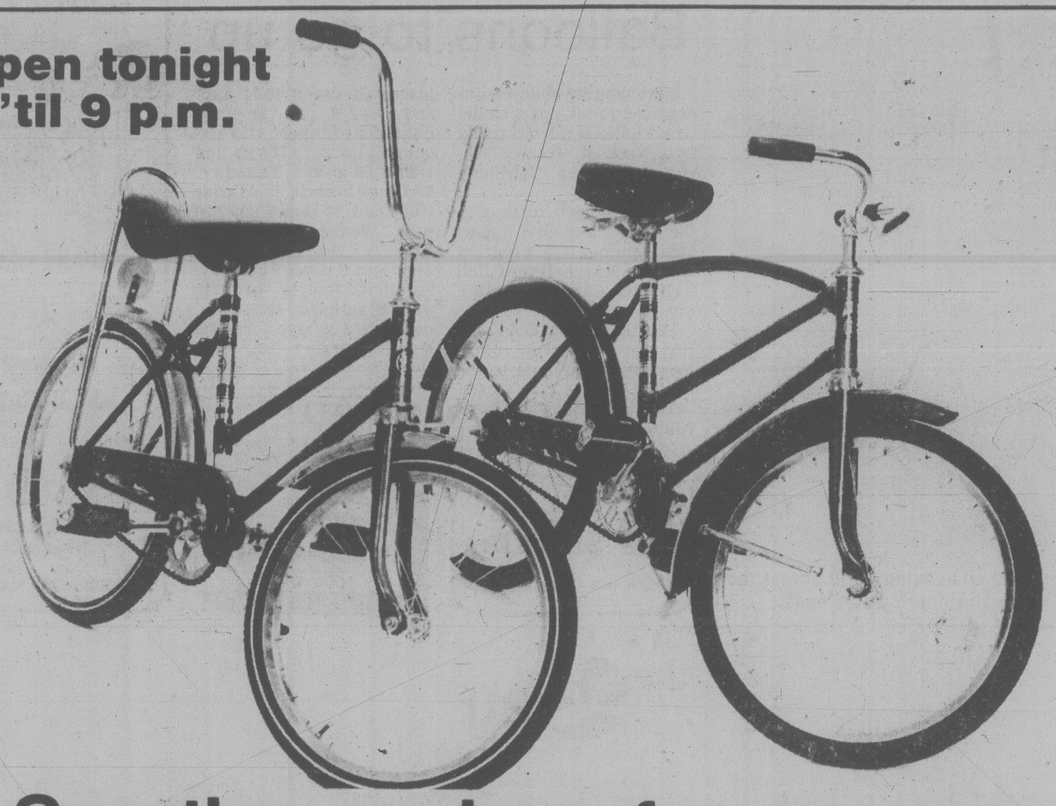

The same procedures will occur for mail sent from London to the United States, with the rates slightly different at 2 pounds (about $5.00) a page.

While the Postal Service guarantees no delivery time, it says letters transmitted from London by 4:30 a.m. should be in the morning mail.

Tipplers triple in Britain

LONDON (AP) — The number of alcoholics in England and Wales tripled in the last 20 years, says a report by the National Council on Alcoholism. The government-sponsored body said if drinking continues to increase, Britain could face a a problem of frightening proportions. To avert what it called a "coming epidemic of alcoholism," the report urged the government to make liquor more expensive and harder to obtain.

These birds sing like canaries for the policeman

Constable Anthony with precious 12-day-old cockatiel chicks

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

In his 20 years on the Victoria police force, Kent Anthony has heard plenty of crooks sing like canaries.

But the sounds are not half as sweet as those he hears daily at his turn-of-the-century home at 109 St. Andrews in James Bay.

Anthony raises canaries. Lots of them.

He has birds in cages in his living-room, in his dining-room, in his kitchen and den. A small adjoining garage has been converted into a full-fledged aviary with more than 50 cages and a large flyway.

Anthony and his wife Pat raise canaries in a big way. Their collection is the largest on the Island and one of the biggest in B.C.

It isn't so much a business as a hobby run wild.

It began seven years ago when a friend gave them their first canary. They liked it so much they got another and another.

Before they knew it they were into breeding and collecting as many rare and exotic varieties they could get their hands on and their pocketbook could afford.

"It just grew like Topsy," says Pat.

Today their stock totals more than 200 with 15 varieties, including brilliant yellow Borders, pink-to-scarlet-hued Red Factors, variegated grey, silver and gold Lizards, crested Glosters and their piece-de-resistance, a breeding pair of delicate Parisienne Frills acquired last year for $250.

Their 16-year-old son Mitchell is just as hooked. He's raising Australian cockatiels.

Tending the birds is a full-time job, particularly during breeding season which starts in April and ends in July.

Things get frantic. The dining-room and living-room become a temporary nursery. Cages of young birds line the table tops, counters, and sills beside the fireplace.

The chicks are separated from the larger flock so the Anthonys can keep a close eye on their development and more readily detect signs of disease or problems.

There is another reason for the separation, however. The chicks have to learn how to sing.

Anthony says there are two basic types of canaries — rollers and choppers. The rollers have a more pleasing song.

But the roller song has to be taught. So the Anthonys have two trained teachers, Wally and Tony, one in the dining-room, the other in the living room who do the job.

This year the Anthonys have raised just under 100 chicks, the progeny of 80 breeders. It hasn't been a good year. Last year they got 225 chicks with only 60 breeders. They can't explain why, but the production of fertilized eggs has declined, a phenomenon that breeders everywhere have experienced.

The Anthonys sell most of their chicks to dealers in Phoenix, Seattle and Toronto.

Anthony says that despite the profit potential and growing demand, he's lucky to break even.

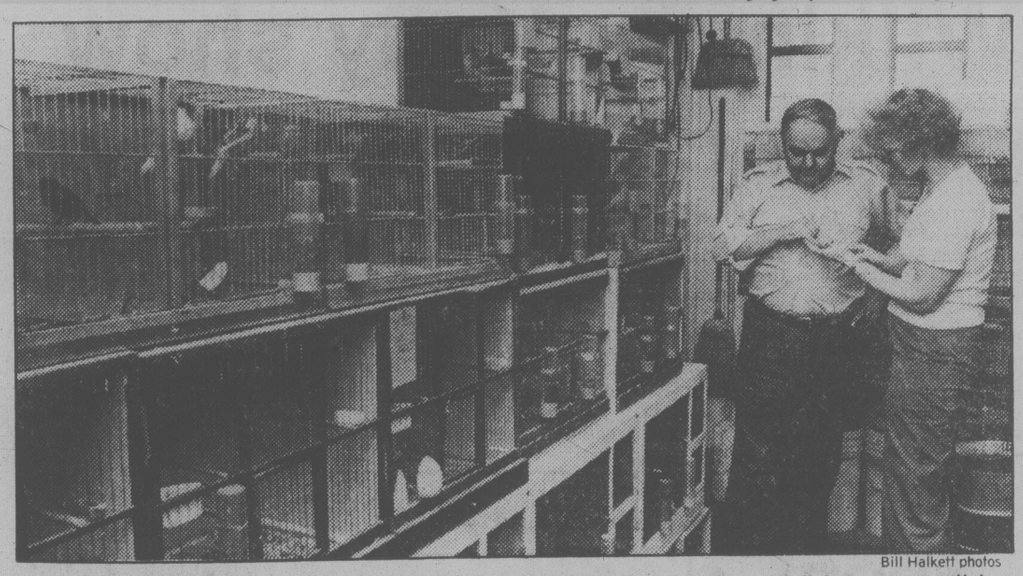

Replenishing his stock is costly. A gold Lizard he acquired from England last year cost $55. The feed — poppy, flax, red rape, niger, yellow millet and canary seed — is another cost. And the antibiotics to treat sick birds.

But money is secondary to breeding show birds. Already they've had some success achieving a first prize for best any other variety at the Canadian National Show at Kelowna last year.

"We're in the canary business primarily because it's fascinating and fun," says Pat. "Once you have a canary, you'll always have one."

. . . or two . . . or more.

Reporters fit to be tied (up?)

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

The sanctity of Victoria's Union Club was violated briefly Tuesday when two tie-less journalists, a female radio reporter and three other media types invaded in search of a story.

The sight of men without ties, and a woman, sent some members of the exclusive men's club into near shock.

When a television cameraman tried at one point to film the entrance area a club member ran out and put his hand over the lens.

"No filming in here," he cried.

That wasn't the only thing the Union Club had rules about.

One elderly member made it clear the tie-less ones had to go.

"Out! Out!" he yelled.

But the press didn't go, and when a photographer took the man's picture, he bristled.

"I'll sue the Times," he thundered.

"Good, you sue the Times," replied the photographer. "I don't work for them."

When he tried to snap another picture, the member retreated down a nearby staircase.

While all this fuss was going on club president Ian Taylor was closeted in his office with a few city aldermen and representatives from the fire department.

The group was there for a tour of the building, which has been labelled as deficient in fire safety requirements by the fire chief.

The club was warned more than a year ago that it had to clean up its act and the fire department was getting set to post warning placards on the building when aldermen decided to take a look.

The media wanted a peek too, but Taylor and company quickly put a stop to that.

"The media are not invited to attend the tour," announced vice-president Ian Horne.

When the press asked to hear that from the mouth of the president, Taylor came reluctantly forward.

He confirmed the media weren't welcome and said the question of fire safety is a private matter.

"But it's of public concern," said a reporter.

"No it's not," said Taylor. "It's between the Union Club, the city and the fire department."

Asked why the club had failed to act on the fire chief's warning over a year ago, Taylor said he was aware of the building's safety deficiencies and they were being seen to.

He said tenders were out and the old club was in for a new alarm system and some extra fire exits, among other things.

With that it was announced the tour was under way and the city delegation was whisked off to see for themselves if the club is safe.

They went without the press, and they went without Ald. Robin Blencoe, a member of city hall's fire prevention committee.

Blencoe had refused to attend because he said the club shouldn't get special treatment.

Other buildings in the city that have failed to upgrade safety measures have been posted with placards warning the public of deficiencies.

Blencoe said the exclusive club should get posted just like all the rest.

Heavy layoffs face Yarrows but not for long

Victoria division of Burrard Yarrows will start work in two weeks on a $29 million Cowichan-class ferry for the Departure Bay-Horseshoe Bay route, general manager Don Challinor said Tuesday.

Work force at the shipyard is expected to reach 835 men when construction reaches a peak later this year. Completion date for the ferry is April, 1981.

Challinor said the work force at Yarrows will temporarily drop to about 350 men when an $8.5 million refit of the drillship Canmar Explorer IV is completed today.

About 526 men have been working on the drillship, formerly known as the Dalmahoy, which is about to leave drydock and head north to the Beaufort Sea to search for oil.

Challinor said outlook for the summer and fall is good with a lot of repair work scheduled.

Yarrows has three barges to complete and will be doing ship repair work through to October.

"We have ship repair work coming and going all the time," Challinor said.

Burrard Yarrows was awarded a $57.8 million contract to build two new ferries. The other one is under construction at the company's North Vancouver dock.

The new vessels will be similar to but improved versions of the ferries Queen of Cowichan and Queen of Coquitlam.

They will be 357 feet long, with room for 360 cars and 1,500 passengers.

The original design has been modified to include improved galleys and seating arrangements.

The new models will be 18 inches wider than the older ships.

'Green thumb' hits gardeners

Oak Bay police today warned residents to guard against a "green thumb" thief.

A police spokesman said the thief has struck about 12 times in the past two weeks.

The thief enters homes through unlocked doors while the occupants are working in their gardens.

Several hundred dollars has already been stolen.

The spokesman said residents should lock their doors even if they are only going to work outside for a short time.

Drivers 87% for striking

Union workers who operate B.C. Hydro buses here and in Vancouver voted 87 per cent Tuesday night in favor of strike action if further contract negotiations with the Crown corporation fail.

Al Ashton, business agent for the Amalgamated Transit Union, which represents 3,300 drivers, mechanics and transit workers, said the union would try to resume talks before taking strike action.

"We hope we can get back to negotiations with B.C. Hydro and conclude an agreement without any (strike) action," he said.

Negotiations between the union and Hydro broke off in May.

The union is seeking a 10-per-cent wage increase in one year. It said Hydro has offered a 5.25-per cent annual wage increase in a two-year package.

Drivers earn $9.80 an hour and top mechanics $11.65 under terms of the last contract which expired March 31.

The union said there are other hurdles to be cleared including Hydro plans to introduce part-time work.

Muscle buildup set for regional plan

The Capital Regional District will put some muscle in its regional plan by July 25 so it can enforce regulations on regional shopping centres.

This morning's meeting of the finance and personnel committee decided the amendments should be before the board by that date.

Meanwhile, if Saanich council agrees, the committee will recommend to the board that Saanich be permitted to have a shopping centre at the Tillicum site with 240,000 square feet of department store-type merchandising.

The committee ruled that any applications for shopping centres of more than 100,000 square feet must be dealt with by the regional board until the regional plan is amended.

Director George Westwood of North Saanich and Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier voted against the motion to restrict shopping centres to 100,000 square feet in the interim.

Couvelier told the committee the 100,000 square foot figure was "unrealistic and impossible."

He said that his lands, planning and housing committee will consider a proposal for a 230,000-square foot shopping centre at Broadmead in early September.

Couvelier protested that there is no legislation to control the expansion of existing shopping centres such as Mayfair.

The committee agreed the regional plan should be amended to include control of such expansion, depending on the impact on the entire region.

During the two-hour debate Couvelier and Outer Gulf Island director Jim Campbell exchanged heated words.

Couvelier accused Campbell of aiming to control Saanich's decisions rather than that of the entire region. Campbell denied this, saying that requirements of the regional plan applied to everyone.

At one point Couvelier exploded, saying: "Saanich has been screwed by the Capital Regional District."

Campbell retorted "Saanich has decided to screw everybody else."

Q. I have just returned from Liverpool, England. Can you tell me how it got its name? I'm told the word Liver is the name of a bird. J.M.

A. There is some controversy over the origin of the name. It appears early Norse settlers called the place Hlitharpollr, "pool of the slopes." But there is a bird called liver, and it was adopted for the crest of the city.

Q. Could you please give me the address of the former federal finance minister Jean Chretien? D.G.

A. His office address is 794 5th. Street, Shawinigan, Quebec, G9N 6V6.

Wendy, partner survive troubles

SAN JUAN — Wendy Barlow of Victoria and Joseph Brabanec of Vancouver eliminated top-seeded Pedro and Crissy Gonzales from the mixed doubles segment of the tennis competition at the Pan-American Games on Tuesday and discovered that the island's hospitality to visitors wears thin when its favorites are losing.

The Canadian twosome survived questionable line calls by local officials and the noisy hostility of the spectators to defeat the Puerto Ricans 6-3, 7-5 in their quarter-final match.

"It's been like this all week," said Brabanec, who vented his frustrations after the match with an obscene gesture to the crowd.

"These people are so ignorant. They don't know what tennis is about.

"I am the kind of player who gets provoked. I tried to hold off to the end but that (the gesture) was something I owed them."

Barlow, normally cool and poised even in defeat, had difficulty controlling her voice after the contest and her hands still shook from the emotional impact of playing in the heat and intensity of the centre court.

"It was two players against 500," she said. "We were getting our serves in and they were calling them out. They (the linesmen) were doing everything to let their players win."

She said the officials were obviously reacting to the crowd by calling points in favor of the Puerto Ricans.

With the score tied 5-5 in the second set, the experienced 19-year-old international player said she was so upset that she could hardly hit the ball.

"I've never had people boo me or yell and scream at double faults."

Brabanec, 22, later conceded he had over-reacted after the match and that it was normal for tennis judges and linesmen to side with hometown players, even at the Davis Cup level.

"But nine out of 10 calls going in their favor is ridiculous."

Barlow said the heat and pressure occasionally got to her.

Once she turned to see one of the ball girls jumping and clapping her hands after a Puerto Rican point. Barlow batted a ball in the general direction of the girl.

"She probably didn't know any better," Barlow said later. "But I have to let it all out or I'll just play worse. After that, I felt better and played better under pressure.

"I didn't try to hit her, just scare her. I guess."

Elsewhere, however, it was a quiet day at the Games — the equivalent of baseball's all-star break.

A mid-term report indicates that, while the United States is still the dominant athletic power of the hemisphere, other countries are nibbling away at the American's lead.

In terms of gold medals, the U.S. won 85 of the 174 awarded in the first 11 days of the games. Cuba, with Maria del Risco's victory in women's individual foil fencing, the only final on Tuesday's schedule, was second with 50 and Canada held third place with 20.

But the substantial American lead takes on a different perspective in comparison with the results of the 1975 Pan-Ams in Mexico City where the U.S. carried off 117 golds to Cuba's 57 and Canada's 18.

The Americans would have to win virtually every remaining event on the card to match their 1975 total, while the Cubans are virtually assured of equalling their Mexico City gold harvest and the Canadians have already surpassed theirs.

Further down the medals table, Argentina has trebled its 1975 haul of three gold medals and Brazil needs one more to reach its target of eight. Only the Mexicans, deprived of the support of their hometown crowds, are lagging with two golds compared with seven last time.

Budgets stretch amazing streak

SAN JUAN — Victoria Budgets' Dave Wilson struck out 13 Colombian batters en route to a no-hit 3-0 softball victory Tuesday, the fourth straight game that Canadian pitchers have not allowed a hit at the Pan-American Games.

In fact, the stingy Budget hurlers have allowed only two hits in the last five games.

Manager Jack Bell says his team, dominated by Budgets, who won the last four national titles and shared a world championship in 1976, will not be content without a gold medal.

The only runs given up by the club were on a three-run home run in a 3-0 loss to the United States, the only loss in the preliminary round of the tournament in which the Canadians compiled a 7-1 record.

Canada finished in a tie with the United States in the preliminary round and will face the Americans in the opening game of the four-team playoffs Thursday.

Wilson, a native of Digby, N.S., faced the minimum 21 batters in the seven-inning contest. Only a second-inning walk marred a perfect game, and that player was erased on a double play.

During the Canadians' four-game pitching performance, Rob Guenter, picked up from Saskatoon, didn't allow a runner on base and fanned 17 in a 10-0 win over Netherlands-Antilles on Monday.

Mark Smith of Halifax, another pitcher borrowed for the tournament, blanked Venezuela 8-0 Saturday and Dave Ruskowski threw a no-hit 7-0 win over the Virgin Islands on Sunday.

Reg Underwood, John Green and Alden Govenlock set the batting pace for Budgets on Tuesday.

Underwood smacked a triple in the second inning and scored on a sacrifice fly by Govenlock. Green opened the seventh inning with a single before Underwood drew a walk and both scored with two out when Govenlock singled and the Colombian left-fielder committed a throwing error.

Underwood, who also singled, appears to be fully recovered from a pre-Games slump and has picked up the slack left when Dennis Eckert injured a knee. Eckert has missed the last three games with stretched ligaments and Mike Henderson, a pickup from Nova Scotia, has filled his spot in right field.

Bob Walton also collected a pair of hits for Budgets while Carl Walker and Wilson had one hit each.

Wilkinson-Kelly show too much for Bombers

WINNIPEG (CP) — The combination of Tom Wilkinson and Brian Kelly paid off Tuesday night as Edmonton Eskimos beat Winnipeg Blue Bombers 28-10 in the first game of the Canadian Football League's western conference regular season for both clubs.

In the eastern conference opener at Toronto, Montreal Alouettes used the kicking skill of Don Sweet to trip the Argonauts 11-9.

Wilkinson, who clicked on 21 of 31 pass attempts for a total 335 yards gained, threw touchdown strikes of 25 and 17 yards to Kelly in the third and the fourth quarters.

Wilkinson said Kelly, who stands five-foot-nine and weighs 170 pounds, is "a good little receiver. He doesn't have a lot of speed, but he's got good hands."

"Usually we'd go to Tom Scott a little bit more, but the linebackers were really riding him," said the veteran quarterback, who found many holes in the Bomber defence and used the same play for both touchdown passes to Kelly.

Middle linebacker Dan Kepley pounced on a blocked field goal try by Bernie Ruoff in the third quarter and ran the ball 60 yards for an Edmonton touchdown.

The three Edmonton majors were converted by Dave Cutler, who also booted field goals of 12 yards in the first quarter and 37 yards near the end of the game. Punter Hank Ilesic got the other Edmonton point on a 57-yard single.

The Bombers' only major came on the last series of the game, when Dieter Brock fired a 42-yard touchdown pass to Mike Holmes. Winnipeg's two-point convert try failed. Ruoff contributed a 41-yard field goal and a 59-yard single. He missed on field goal tries from 48 and 42 yards out.

The play was sluggish at the start of the game but Holmes gave the crowd of 24,020 a lift when he took an Ilesic punt and returned it 41 yards.

However, the Bomber offensive drive fizzled out on the Eskimo 28-yard line, as Brock gambled and lost on a third-and-one quarterback option.

The defensive stand appeared to give the Eskimos the spark they needed.

Edmonton's total ground gain was 92 yards, only 10 yards more than the Winnipeg effort. Jim Germany was the main rusher, carrying 14 times for 61 yards.

Sweet kicked three field goals to get the Alouetes past the Argos in a game dominated by the defensive units.

leg of place-kicker Don Sweet connected on kicks of 17, 24 and 47 yards.

he margin of victory, however, proved to be a disastrous third-down snap by Toronto centre Tom Davis that sialed over punter Ian Sunter's head 40 yards into the end zone. Sunter conceded for a safety at 4:59 of the second quarter.

The Argonauts scored the lone touchdown of the game at 3:45 of the opening quarter when Terry Metcalf dived over from the one-yard line. Toronto's other points came off Sunter's foot on two singles and a convert.

All in all, it was a miserable night for Sunter who missed on field goal attempts from the 43- and 35-yard lines and injured his left leg on an aborted field goal attempt in the third quarter following another high snap.

Neither Joe Barnes nor Jerry Dattilio looked sharp at quarterback for Montreal with Barnes playing the first half and Dattilio the second.

Quarterback Tony Adams went all the way for Toronto in his CFL debut and put together an ineffective performance.

Mussels hit road after loss to Salem

Victoria Mussels are on the road today after losing 7-6 to Salem Senators in a Northwest League baseball game Tuesday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Designated-hitter Steve Blackman and outfielder Tom Moore each drove in two runs to spark the Senators.

Moore, who had three hits, knocked in runs with a single in the first inning and a double in the sixth. Blackman contributed two RBIs with a single in the seventh.

Paul Kirsch and John Siefried also enjoyed three-hit afternoons as Salem pounded three Mussels' pitchers for 16 hits.

Bill Hayne, who relieved starter Tom Vasche in the fourth inning, earned his second win in as many decisions, striking out five in 4 2-3 innings.

Two-run doubles from third-baseman Doug Morganti and shortstop Rod Murphy helped Victoria produce five runs in the fourth inning.

Mussels return home July 18 to meet Grays Harbor Mets.

Irish game switched

Victoria Shamrocks, who play Vancouver Burrards tonight, have arranged a four-point Western Lacrosse Association night with Nanaimo Timbermen for July 27 at Nanaimo's Civic Centre.

Game time tonight is 8.

Timbermen were unable to play a game scheduled for Saturday in Nanaimo and have arranged with Victoria to play that game and the final 12 minutes of the May 31 contest on July 27.

In league play Tuesday, New Westminster Salmonbellies scored six unanswered goals in the third period to come from behind for an 18-16 overtime win over Burrards.

Bob Tasker and Wayne Goss led New Westminster scoring with four each while Brian Tasker, Norm Leuszler, Bill Mosdell and Derek Dickson added two each. Len Cimminelli and Rod Sipka scored singles.

Leading Vancouver were Dan Perrault with three goals and Miki Gillies, Ron Pinder, Doug Hayes and Taki Vohalis with two each. Mike McMillan, Bill Foote, Stuart Aird, Alan Kirk and Terry Bingley added singles.

The Burrards led 4-3 after the first period and 11-6 after the second but the Salmonbellies' six unanswered goals tied the score at 14-14 by the end of regulation time.

New Westminster netminder Jim Poeltzer made 39 saves while Vancouver's Dave Evans turned aside 37.

Inexperienced protectors boost Lancaster's worries

REGINA (CP) — This is Ron Lancaster's 20th season in the Canadian Football League and he's like a nervous cat as Saskatchewan Roughriders open their regular-season schedule here tonight against British Columbia Lions.

Lancaster is pacing because he's counting on an inexperienced offensive line to protect quarterback Tom Clements from the perils of the pass rush in his first season as head coach of the Western Football Conference team.

Rookie offensive linemen like centre Bob Poley and tackle Gerry Hornett likely will determine just how far the Roughriders can go in 1979.

Clements, obtained from Ottawa Rough Riders for one year as he plays out his CFL option, gives Lancaster a qualified field general. Backfielders Mike Strickland and Molly McGee are experienced, too. Then there's the offensive line.

Tackle Joe Miller, considered the best pass protector, underwent an emergency appendectomy Saturday and has been replaced by Curtis Wester. That leaves only guard Ralph Galloway with the necessary experience to be Clements' bodyguard.

"We have to get a big, big effort from 33 people for 16 games or we'll go down the tube," says Lancaster, who owns 20 CFL records as a quarterback.

Lancaster also has problems on defence, where he's trying to replace corners Paul Williams (retired) and Steve Dennis (traded for Clements). Rookies Leroy Paul and Homer Butler get the assignment of covering B.C.'s wide receivers.

They won't have to contend with talented Leon Bright of the Lions, however, because Bright is in Florida tending to an urgent personal matter. His father was involved in a shooting incident and hospitalized.

The Lions will use import tight end Tennie Pierce, a rookie cut Friday and re-signed Saturday when Bright left Vancouver, plus reliable Canadian Al Charuk at the outside receiving positions.

Jerry Tagge, who guided the Lions to a playoff berth in 1977 and fell on his face last season, will be at quarterback, despite not having directed a touchdown drive during the exhibition season.

B.C. is coming off a fourth-place finish and 7-7-2 season. Head coach Vic Rapp went looking for offensive linemen and a better pass rush in the off-season, but only came up with rookie defensive end Richard Murray of Oklahoma as a new addition.

Swan sparks Cable victory

Burnaby Cablevison moved to within one point of first-place Richmond Roadrunners by swamping Esquimalt Legion 15-4 in a Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game Tuesday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Burnaby captain John Swan led the way with six goals and a pair of assists.

John Purdon scored three times for Cablevision while Guy Prentice and Paulo Brunoro each connected twice. Singles were contributed by Dan McLenaghan and [illegible]

Mike Game, Mike Thomas, Ed Van Dyke and Terry Jay tallied for Esquimalt, which trailed 6-1 after one period and 11-4 after two.

Rod Bannister stopped 33 shots for Burnaby while Mike Dutch and Bill Thomas combined to make 37 saves for Esquimalt.

Dirt bikers take aim at noisy brethren

Dirt bikers — motorcyclists who prefer to ride off-road — are attempting to clean up their image.

A new booklet produced by the B.C. Motorcycle Federation, entitled The Trick Set-Up, is trying to keep the sport alive and increase public awareness of the aims of their organization.

It's a commendable move and I hope they succeed in changing the attitudes of the minority of bikers who befoul the sport by invoking the wrath of the public.

Some of my best friends ride off-road. By the same token, I've had the grim experience of having a peaceful morning afield shattered by a pack of scatterbrained individuals whooping and hollering along on their unmuffled bikes.

It's that facet of the sport — noise — which I believe produces the most objections from non-bikers.

And the booklet addresses the situation directly:

"On a busy street your bike may go unnoticed but in a forest or field the quietest trail bike comes under close scrutiny and a noisy one will evoke a declaration of war. War not just against loud motorcycles but against all bikes in the bush. It's a war we can win by declaring war on noisy bikes ourselves.

"If we are to survive we must keep quiet."

The booklet goes on to point out various ways in which mufflers and throttle handling can be utilized to produce a minimum amount of aural pollution.

It is estimated there are over 20,000 dirt bikes in British Columbia and the behavior of a minority of non-club individuals has eroded the image of those who pursue the sport in a responsible manner.

"No Trespassing" signs have been ignored, campers disturbed, wildlife harrassed, and fragile areas of the back-country damaged by this fringe element.

Luckily, the B.C. Motorcycle Federation has recognized the fact that this impact is affecting all dirt bikers with ever-increasing land closures.

The majority of riders can no longer shrug off the problem by denying responsiblility. They must do all they can to ensure the thoughtless few are informed their behavior might destroy the land access on which the sport thrives.

Other chapters in the booklet deal with purchasing a bike, legalities of owning and operating a dirt bike, preparation for emergencies, special riding techniques, where and how to ride and treating Mother Nature with respect.

The booklet is available free of charge at most motorcycle shops, clubs or directly from the B.C. Motorcycle Federation office at 3750 80th Street, Delta, B.C. V4K 3N2.

From a bystander's point of view, let's hope the effort produces some positive results.

Unser upstages big slugger

By Associated Press

Big Mike Schmidt is the man baseball fans in Philadelphia expect to hit home runs and if any records are to be set in that category, he's the one they figure can do it.

But Del Unser?

Both Schmidt and Unser homered Tuesday night as the Phillies rallied for a 6-5 victory over San Diego Padres. Unser's homer, though, outdid Schmidt's — it not only scored three runs but also set a major league record.

Schmidt's 30th homer of the season tied a National League record for the most homers in five consecutive games — seven.

Unser's made him the first player in major league history to pinch-hit three homers in consecutive at-bats. They have been well-spaced, the first June 30 against St. Louis Cardinals, the second July 5 against New York Mets, but they go into the record book as if they came one after the other.

In other NL games Tuesday night, Pittsburgh Pirates edged Houston Astros 4-3, Cincinnati Reds defeated St. Louis Cardinals 4-2, Chicago Cubs downed Atlanta Braves 7-3, San Francisco Giants outlasted the Montreal Expos 11-7 in 13 innings and Los Angeles Dodgers beat New York Mets 7-4.

Schmidt has hit three in one night, as he did last Saturday, in part of his current surge. But it was Unser who was fielding the questions about home runs in the aftermath of his sudden ascent into the spotlight.

"I was just wanted something I could see and hit," he said of the first pitch from Padres' reliever Rollie Fingers that he sent over the centre field wall, the deepest part of the stadium.

Phillies manager Danny Ozark, who sent Unser up to hit for Larry Bowa, who had a triple earlier, was surprised that Unser's hit cleared the fence. Ozark said he had been hoping for a double.

Unser's blast, which capped a five-run rally by the Phils, broke a record he shared with 21 others for hitting two consecutive pinch-hit homers.

Tom Seaver passed Cy Young and moved into sixth place on baseball's all-time list of career strikeout leaders before he left after six innings because of stiffness in his pitching shoulder. Seaver struck out eight and boosted his career total to 2,823.

In American League games, Oakland A's nipped Baltimore Orioles 7-6, Seattle Mariners beat New York Yankees 5-1, Detroit Tigers shaded Minnesota Twins 6-5, Cleveland Indians defeated Kansas City Royals 7-4, Chicago White Sox downed Texas Rangers 6-3 and California Angels trimmed Boston Red Sox 4-3.

Yankee ace Ron Guidry gave up two homers while Mariners' Rick Honeycutt gave up just two hits — Reggie Jackson's single and Graig Nettles' RBI triple — to record the first two-hitter in Seattle history as the Mariners downed New York.

Detroit rallied with three runs in the ninth inning, including a two-run blast by pinch-hitter Champ Summers, to come from behind and edge the Twins.

Gordon Head takes crown

Gordon Head completed a climb through the losers' bracket and captured the District Girls' Little League championship with an 8-3 decision over Lakehill in the deciding game of a double-loss elimination tournament Tuesday at Majestic Park.

Diana Beatty pitched the victory and Tina Cullimore came up with two run-producing hits for Gordon Head, which now advances to the four-team, round-robin British Columbia tournament at the same site starting Friday.

Gordon Head had forced the extra game by defeating previously-unbeaten Lakehill 5-1 on Monday.

"Thanks for doing my homework last night. The teacher thinks I'm retarded!"

Mike Creery places second

RICHMOND — John Hill of Vancouver Olympic Club won over-all laurels Tuesday in the 10,000-metre event which formed the second event in an eight-part Adidas Grand Prix track series.

His time was 30 minutes, eight seconds.

Clubmate Mike Creery of Victoria won the 30-39-year-old (pre-masters) age category and finished second over-all with a personal best 30:10 clocking.

Both runners are now qualified for the national trials in Quebec City.

Among other Victorians, Chris Garrett-Petts of Prairie Inn Harriers placed third in pre-masters and Garth Ball of the Flying "Y" was fourth among masters.

Angel rookie with all-stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Four relievers including fireballing Jim Kern of Texas Rangers and rookie Mark Clear of California Angels were named to the American League pitching staff for the 50th all-star baseball game against the National League scheduled for next Tuesday night in the Seattle Kingdome.

Other bullpen specialists selected by American League manager Bob Lemon and announced by league president Lee MacPhail are Don Stanhouse of Baltimore Orioles and Sid Monge of Cleveland Indians.

The AL also chose Boston's Bob Stanley, who is used as both as a starter and a reliever by the Red Sox. The regular starters chosen were New York Yankee team-mates Tommy John and Ron Guidry, Nolan Ryan of California Angels and Dave Lemanczyk of Toronto Blue Jays.

The National League staff, named earlier Tuesday, includes three Houston hurlers — Joe Niekro, Joaquin Andujar and Joe Sambito — Steve Carlton of Philadelphia, Montreal's Steve Rogers, Gaylord Perry of San Diego, Mike LaCoss of Cincinnati and Bruce Sutter of the Chicago Cubs.

Niekro, Andujar, Carlton, Rogers, Perry and LaCoss are all starters while Sambito and Sutter work out of the bullpen.

Kern, traded to the Rangers by Cleveland this season, has a 10-1 record with 15 saves and a league-leading 1.34 earned-run average.

Clear, a top candidate for the AL rookie of the year award, has a 9-2 record with seven saves and a 2.56 ERA.

Stanhouse is 6-1 with 12 saves and a 2.64 ERA for Baltimore's East Division leaders. Monge is 6-6 with nine saves and a 1.95 ERA.

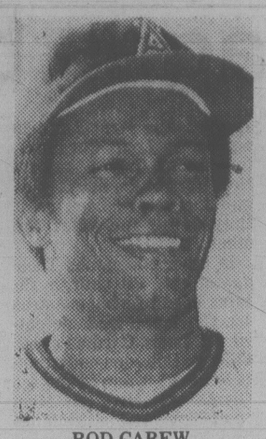

Of the starters, John has the best record with a league leading 13 victories and just three losses. Guidry, who was 25-3 and won the Cy Young Award last year, is 6-5 with two saves and has been troubled by injuries.

Ryan is 11-6 and leads the league with five shutouts. His 151 strikeouts is tops in the majors. Stanley is 10-5 with one save and Lemanczyk is 7-6 with a 3.09 ERA.

The combined record of the nine-man AL staff is 78-35, a .690 percentage, with 46 saves. Six of the pitchers are right-handers with Guidry, John and Monge the AL southpaws. Only four — Ryan, John, Kern and Guidry — have previous all-star experience.

The AL chose to pass up Minnesota bullpen ace Mike Marshall, whose 18 saves lead the league. Marshall has a 9-8 record.

Also passed over were Jerry Koosman of the Twins, 11-6, Baltimore team-mates Dennis Martinez, 10-6, and Mike Flanagan, 11-6, Mike Caldwell of Milwaukee, 10-5 and Ferguson Jenkins of Texas, 9-5.

ROD CAREW
. . . all-time fans' choice

An offer to buy Bruins

NEW WESTMINSTER, (CP) — Joseph Scarlatti, a Vancouver land developer, has entered into a tentative agreement to purchase New Westminster Bruins, the Western Hockey League club has confirmed.

The purchase price was not disclosed, but the reported asking price was $400,000.

The announcement said Scarlatti has 30 days to complete the deal which must be approved by the major junior hockey league's board of governors.

Coach Ernie McLean and general manager Bill Shinske will be retained by the new owner.

The Bruins moved to New Westminster from Estevan, Sask., for the 1971-72 season and have won two Memorial Cups since then.

Carew elected for tenth time

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Carew topped the American League all-star voting for the fourth time and became the only major leaguer to be elected in all 10 years of fan balloting, final tabulations announced by commissioner Bowie Kuhn show.

However, the California Angels' first baseman, who started the last three All-Star games at first and the previous six at second base, will be out of manager Bob Lemon's lineup for the clash against the National League at Seattle's Kingdome on July 17 because of ligament damage in his right thumb.

The replacement at first for Carew, who drew 3,997,081 votes, tops of any player in either league, will be Cecil Cooper of Milwaukee Brewers, who drew just over a million votes.

He will join shortstop Roy Smalley of Minnesota Twins, catcher Darrell Porter, second baseman Frank White and third baseman George Brett, all of Kansas City Royals and outfielders Jim Rice, Fred Lynn and Carl Yastrzemski of Boston Red Sox in the starting lineup.

Smalley, whose major league-leading .362 batting average netted him 2,572,331 votes, will be making his first all-star appearance. By beating out New York Yankee's Bucky Dent by more than 500,000 votes, Smalley became the AL's fifth different starting shortstop in the last five years.

Also elected for the first time were White and Porter, whose 2,046,505 votes ended the catching dominance shared by New York's Thurman Munson and Boston's Carlton Fisk.

White, a backup all-star at short in last year's game, also became the fifth starter at his position in five seasons, beating out 1977 starter Willie Randolph of the Yankees by 190,127 votes.

Boston's starting outfield had been running 1-2-3 through virtually the entire voting period. At the wire, Rice just edged past Lynn, who had led the outfield voting until the final count.

Yastrzemski will be making his 16th all-star appearance.

Rose gets chance to set record

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Rose will have the chance to set an all-star game record by playing at his fifth different position in Tuesday night's 50th annual major league baseball contest at the Seattle Kingdome.

The Philadelphia Phillies first baseman was among 13 reserves named to the National League squad today by all-star manager Tommy Lasorda of Los Angeles Dodgers.

It will be the seventh straight all-star game for Rose, who will back up Steve Garvey of the Dodgers at first base.

Rose, who has already appeared at second base, third base, left field and right field in his 11 all-star games, was joined on the list of reserves by second baseman Joe Morgan of Cincinnati, third baseman Ron Cey of Los Angeles, shortstops Dave Concepcion of Cincinnati and Garry Templeton of St. Louis, outfielders Lou Brock of St. Louis, Jack Clark of San Francisco, Gary Matthews of Atlanta, Dave Kingman of Chicago and Lee Mazzilli of New York and catchers Bob Boone of Philadelphia, Gary Carter of Montreal and Johnny Bench of Cincinnati.

The fans voted Dave Winfield of San Diego Padres, Dave Parker of Pittsburgh Pirates and George Foster of the Reds to start in the outfield, while the infield starters are Garvey and Davey Lopes of Los Angeles and Larry Bowa and Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia.

The top vote-getter among the catchers was Ted Simmons of the Cardinals, but he'll miss the game due to a broken wrist, so either Boone, Carter or Bench will get the start. Bench was the runner-up in the fan voting, the first time he has lost since the fans were allowed to select the all-stars in 1970.

It will be the first all-star game for Matthews and Mazzilli who, like Clark and Parker, are the sole representatives of their respective teams.

Leaders in National League voting:

First Base
1. Steve Garvey, Los Angeles, 2,810,165; 2. Pete Rose, Philadelphia, 2,099,266; 3. Willie Stargell, Pittsburgh, 1,097,244; 4. Keith Hernandez, St. Louis, 953,955; 5. Bill Buckner, Chicago, 787,534; 6. Tony Perez, Montreal, 641,882; 7. Dan Driessen, Cincinnati, 523,289; 8. Willie Montanez, New York, 187,424.

Second Base

Student athletes selected

A total of 24 athletes from the Lower Vancouver Island area have been selected to participate in the seventh annual youth development camp sponsored by the British Columbia Federation of School Athletic Associations.

This month's camp at the B.C. Institute of Technology draws student athletes of 14 and 15 years of age, from throughout the province.

Athletes are housed on the BCIT campus at Burnaby while developing their potentials in one of six sports — badminton, rugby, bowling, basketball, soccer and wrestling.

Lower Island athletes chosen are:

Badminton: Cindy Randall, Ken McClean, Margo Nightingale, Marcie Wilson.
Rugby: Rob Martin, Paul Cumberland, Brian Litsev, Paul Woodske, Bernie Struck, Derek Brown, Greg Long.
Basketball: Debbie Lehman, Cheryl Wilson, Tracy Stokes, Susan Bond, Donna Carey.
Soccer: Steve Rogak, Cam Lansdell, Jonathan Boss, Bruce Cafferky, Adam Keith.
Wrestling: Doug Millward, Reece Cordic, Jerry Dardengo.

Wests face Atlantic club in first test

Victoria West will be chasing its second national title when the Canadian soccer championship tournament is staged at Royal Athletic Park, Sept. 14-16.

Officials of the host B.C. Soccer Association have announced the tournament dates.

Wests, who play in the first division of the Vancouver Island League, captured the Canadian crown in 1976.

Wests will face the Atlantic Regional winner and Western Canada will go against Central Canada in opening-round games of competition for the Labatts Challenge Cup.

Victoria girls on B.C. teams

Three women from Victoria have been selected to the British Columbia volleyball teams entered in the Western Canada Games in Saskatoon and the Pacific Rim championships in Hilo, Hawaii.

Kelly Meechan and Heather Alexander will play in the Western Canada Games next month and Jill Fougner will compete in the Pacific Rim tourney, Aug. 14-18.

Kent Andrews of Victoria will coach the Pacific Rim squad in competition with Korea, Australia, China, the United States and the Canadian national junior team.

Perfect effort pads win streak

Kathy Hawley pitched a perfect game Tuesday night, powering Stockers North Americans to a 15-0 romp over Capital City Pirates in a Victoria Senior Women's Softball League game at Hyacinth Park.

In the other game, Bemister's Welding tripped Esquimalt Rebels, 11-6.

It was Hawley's ninth straight win without a defeat this season. She struck out seven batters and didn't allow a single batter to reach base.

Bea Wallace led the Stocker offence with three hits while Hawley, Laurie Grimston and Gail Prince had two each.

Jan Nowell sparked Bemister's by driving in four runs.

Farmers tripped

Brian Meadmore tagged a double to drive in the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning Tuesday night as runner-up Lumberworld edged first-place Farmer Construction 6-5 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Russ Holmes had driven in the tying run earlier in the frame.

Ron Holmes led Farmers by driving in three runs, including his third home run of the season.

In Stuffy McGinnis Men's League play, Ray Beveridge compensated at the plate for his faulty pitching as Elks-Athletics tripped Labatts 8-7 at Central Park.

Beveridge went the distance and allowed 10 hits but managed to drive in the winning run with a single in the seventh inning.

Tim Galavan smashed a homer and drove in two runs for Elks-Athletics while Ross Barnett drove in four runs and Bill Clifford tagged a homer for Labatts.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Marv Carver pitched a four-hitter to help Capital Builders to a 2-0 Heywood Men's League decision over Remco Office Systems.

Carver struck out two and issued no walks while taking the win.

In Macdonald Men's League action, Ken Greenhaulgh earned the shutout and Ash Douglass hit a two-run homer as Stratheona Stingers tripped The Saints 6-0 and Mayfair Insurance edged Victoria Ambulance 1-0 at Macdonald Park.

White, Hunter reach semis

Derek White and Rick Hunter gained the semi-finals of the 18-and-under singles competition in the Pacific Northwest regional tennis championships with victories during the opening round Tuesday.

White tripped Michael Lim 7-5, 6-4 and Hunter topped Mike Soldat 7-6, 6-4.

Peter Cowley and Pat Merrigan advanced to the semis by default.

Colin Kettenacker defeated Mark Howe 4-6, 6-2, 6-2 to reach the 14-and-under boys' semi-finals.

In 16-and-under girls' play, Laura Slade downed Jane Bennett 6-1, 6-2; Cynthia Smith bounced Kim Rogers 6-3, 6-2; Michele Aichelle tripped Judy Houghton 6-1, 6-1 and Polly McLeod defeated Denise Dobson 6-1, 6-1 to reach the semis.

Kelly Davies ousted Kelly Karakuk 6-1, 6-1; Amanda Levey disposed of Tessa Crofton 6-2, 6-1; Shona Brown eliminated Heidi Ladd 6-0, 6-0 and Dobson tripped Jennifer Little 6-1, 6-0 in the 14-and-under quarter-finals.

Action continues through the week at the Racquet Club of Victoria and some other area courts.

The finals will be staged Thursday at the Racquet Club.

Phipps signs

CHICAGO (AP) — Quarterback Mike Phipps has signed two one-year contracts with Chicago Bears of the National Football League. Phipps started four of the Bears' last six games last season.

Galindez adds blubber

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The promoter of Victor Galindez' World Boxing Association light-heavyweight title defence against Marvin Johnson of Indianapolis has postponed indefinitely the scheduled bout because the champion is 26 pounds overweight.

Juan Carlos Lectoure, who had scheduled the fight for Aug. 11 in Luna Park here, said Tuesday night he had told Johnson's manager of the postponement but gave no new date for the bout.

Lectoure said he made the decision after watching Galindez hold one of his few training sessions since defending the WBA title against Mike Rossman in New Orleans on April 14.

Galindez weighed 201 pounds.

Victoria boxer captures silver

Victoria boxer Gary Robinson is moving up on the medal list.

Fighting out of the Victoria Athletic Boxing Club, Gary last year won a third-place bronze in the Canadian junior championships.

Last weekend at the 1979 national junior meet in Regina, Robinson earned a silver medal and came close to making it a gold. The Victorian dropped a split decision to Alex Hilton in the final of the 139-pound weight class.

Another Athletic Club puncher, Cliff Ballendine, has started a boxing tour that will bring him from the Atlantic coast back to Victoria.

Selected as Golden Boy in B.C. this year, the 110-pound Ballendine won won two bouts in Nova Scotia during the weekend, earning a decision over Doug Maxwell in New Waterford on Saturday and stopping Darrell Hudson in the second round Sunday at Downsville.

Flanagan won't approve deal to join Tea Men

BOSTON (AP) — New England Tea Men have lost Mike Flanagan, last year's most-valuable player in the North American Soccer League, because he wants to play in England, team spokesman Vince Casey has confirmed.

Flanagan called the team from London to say he will not approve the $1.3-million deal for the Tea Men to buy his contract from his English club, Charlton. Flanagan scored 30 goals for New England last season while he was on loan from Charlton.

Parks spins one-hitter

Triangle and Esquimalt scored opening-round victories Tuesday as play got underway in Greater Victoria Little League area baseball tournaments.

Michael Smith pitched a three-hitter and Dan Ruttan and Vince Smythe blasted home runs to boost Triangle to a 5-1 win over Gordon Head in the Area One opener at Lampson Street Park.

Tony Parks came up with a one-hitter as Esquimalt blanked Beacon Hill 6-0 in Area Two action at Lambrick Park.

Parks, who struck out 15, and catcher Don Mowat helped out at the plate with run-scoring doubles and Eric Holden added a home run.

Layritz and Sidney were tied 1-1 in the Area Three opener at Sidney when the game was called because of rain.

In the Babe Ruth (14-15) tournament at Layritz Park, Triangle and Layritz were deadlocked 5-5 after eight innings when darkness forced a halt to play. It will be finished starting at 5:30 tonight.

SPRAWLING freight yard of Canadian Pacific Rail splits a six-kilometre section of inner Winnipeg and has caused headaches for city council. Some residents want the yard moved so the land could be developed to revitalize the Winnipeg core area. Other residents and some city council members say relocation is too costly and would take too long. They want a bridge to ease traffic problems built over the yard instead.

Pickerel fishing 'terrible'

GIMLI, Man. (CP) — Fishermen say the pickerel take at the south end of Lake Winnipeg is the worst in years and a number of them have quit taking their boats out as the spring season draws to a close.

"It's absolutely terrible," said Joe Matheson as he unloaded his nets Monday onto the pier at Gimli, about 100 kilometres north of Winnipeg.

Matheson said he set nine nets overnight and caught only 15 pounds of pickerel.

"I made $8 today and a roast costs $9. It doesn't even pay for my gas," he said.

Oscar Jonasson of Riverton, Man., about 45 kilometres north of Gimli, said he stopped fishing July 6 after netting only about one quarter of his 5,000-pound seasonal quota because he was "going in the hole every day."

A spokesman for the federal Freshwater Fish Marketing Corp. said the poor season may result in higher retail prices for pickerel.

He said a record whitefish season on the north end of Lake Winnipeg means there will be no general fish shortage this year.

The big bad 'beef cycle' can take us all for a ride

Farming Report

By Leo Quigley

United Press Canada

In a free enterprise system like Canada's, economic cycles accompany just about any commodity you can name.

They come and go like clockwork.

When the supply of widgets is down, the price goes up. When the price goes up, widget makers leap into action and flood the market. When the market is flooded, the price goes down.

When you're a consumer looking for widgets at the local store, you can't help but wonder what's going on in the wonderful world of merchandising.

You may try to balance the budget by buying up low-priced widgets and storing them. It's a natural reaction, but in the end such tactics can only accentuate the widget cycle. In the end, nobody benefits.

One of the places consumers notice these cycles most is at the supermarket, where week-to-week fluctuations are highly visible. And, they are most evident at the meat counter — especially in the section set aside for beef roasts and steaks.

This cycle — "The Beef Cycle" — is a source of anguish for consumers when prices are going up, a source of frustration for packers when cattle supplies shrink, and a source of bankruptcy for beef producers who spend 2 ½ years building up a beef herd only to find that the price of steers has sunk below production costs when the first load is ready for market.

How do you control these cyclical surges in supply and demand?

People representing all segments of the beef indstry — from rancher to consumer — tried to answer this question at the Livestock Marketing Congress in Denver, Colo. last month — and failed to find an easy answer.

No consumer advocate, not even outspoken Kathleen O'Reilly of the Consumer Federation of America, suggested a consumer boycott as an answer to high beef prices.

Everyone, from U.S. cattle associations to packers and consumer representatives, warned government against intervening further in the beef business.

The only proposal inviting government participation came from a Canadian, Prof. Murray Hawkins of the University of Alberta, who suggested a government sponsored voluntary trust account for beef producers which would build up in good years and pay out in lean years.

Funded by a check-off on cattle marketings and government contributions, the individual accounts might stabilize the business at the grassroots level and help tame the cycle, Prof. Hawkins said.

But the congress rejected even this mild proposal. In fact, when all the options were examined, beef producers, packers and consumer advocates were left with few concrete ideas.

Ultimately, the congress seemed to agree that the best approach rests in improved marketing information for beef producers, education and counter-cyclical import policies to allow more imported beef into the country in times of short supply and to restrict imports in times of surplus.

After three days of pondering the question, this could hardly be called a revelation.

In fact, by the time all the high-priced speakers and moderators had finished — including notables such as Bill Monroe of NBC's Meet the Press, Dale Tinstman of the giant Iowa Beef Processors Inc., Dr. Gar Aplerovits of the National Centre for Economic Alternatives in Washington, D.C., and William Rush, publisher of the National Review — the most workable idea had come from the Canadian Cattlemen's Association.

The CCA's "Beefwatch" program relies on economic analysis and sound business decisions by cattlemen who influence the beef cycle. By keeping track of Canadian cattle numbers and fluctuations in the national herd, the CCA has been extremely successful in keeping cattlemen informed of where they are in the cycle.

Lost boy likely dead

EDMONTON (CP) — Peter Reimer admitted for the first time Tuesday his son Kevin may be dead.

After a professional searcher from the United States gave up his hunt for the nine-year-old boy who went missing in Elk Island Park June 29, Reimer choked back a sob.

"That's all there is . . . the show's all over," he said. "I don't want to believe it, but I really don't think he's alive."

Tom Brown Jr., a searcher who has hunted lost persons around the world, told Reimer about Tuesday morning his tracking indicated Kevin may have been picked up by a vehicle and he would not rule out foul play.

Brown said he and his four assistants had found trails made by a boy of the same weight and size as Kevin that led to a paved road in the park.

The last-ditch hunt by the American culminated 11 days and 15,000 man hours of intensive searching among the thick bush and trees in the park.

Throughout the ordeal, Reimer and his wife, Velma, remained at the park sleeping in a small tent trailer.

Welfare restraint 'too costly'

By JIM ROBB
FP News Service

OTTAWA — Call it "whistling in the dark" or "flying in the face of fortune."

Canada's 7,000 professional social workers want the federal and provincial governments to stop mouthing off about restraint and look more closely at the social costs of poorly developed social services in this country.

The Canadian Association of Social Workers is seeking an early meeting with Welfare Minister David Crombie — CASW thinks it has a date with the minister early in September — to give him the message.

Dr. Richard Splane, president of CASW has written Crombie to tell him that:

1. Federal and provincial restraint programs are having "destructive and socially costly effects on large sectors of the Canadian lopulation."

2. Action is needed at the federal and provincial levels to honor a 1975 commitment by governments to develop and extend community social services in all parts of the country . . . "a plan unanimously agreed upon by all governments . . . twice put into legislation in parliament but still not enacted, and still not implemented in any form."

CASW is using and extending a study into the effect of government restraint on Saskatchewan's social services to bolster its call for leadership by the federal government.

The Saskatchewan study documented tightened eligibility requirements demanded of applicants for services, lowered staff morale in the social services affected, increased delays in providing services for people in need, ad an increase in "community dissatisfaction."

The latter finding suggests that government restraint programs may not always be as popular as politicians want to believe.

Splane, a former federal assistant deputy minister of welfare during the "reform" era, when the Canada Assistance Plan of 1966 and other progressive legislation was passed by the federal government, now teaches social policy at the University of British Columbia.

The CASW president is certain that Crombie will be in the tradition of all the federal health and welfare ministers appointed since the deplartment was created by Mackenzie King's government in the mid-40s.

Without exception, Splane said in an interview Tuesday, the federal ministers have been men and women with a demonstrated interest in welfare and a determination to improve the social security system as much as possible within cabinet constraints.

He contrasted them with the ministers appointed by provincial premiers. More than once they have been individuals who were actively hostile to the needs of the people they were supposed to be helping.

Splane couldn't explain why provincial premiers thought there was political mileage to be gained in "welfare backlash" politics, but he has seen the game played several times during his years in the federal government and in teaching social policy.

In British Columbia, the welfare system suffered while William Vander Zalm was minister of human resources, Splane said.

Now that Grace McCarthy is the minister, Splane said he was "hoping the corner has been turned." He has hopes McCarthy will build the social service system the province needs.

The federal and provincial governments are agreed that a system of community social services, covering 11 different fields, from protective services for children to crisis intervention centres is needed, Splane said.

But two federal bills to finance those services died without parliamentary approval in 1977 and 1978.

Splane wants his social workers to help rekindle government interest in the need for a comprehensive social service system extending to all regions of Canada.

"There is an enormous need in all parts of Canada," Splane said.

"There is no community in Canada that has the range of social services or the quality of social services you can find in a European city," he declared.

"This country is far behind and we don't know it."

"There is something un healthy about a society that cannot prevent a larger number of family breakdowns, reduce delinquency rates and keep more men and women out of jail," Splane said.

"We've got to try to get governments moving again, even though the mood of politics is one of restraint."

Paint linked to disease?

HAMILTON (CP) — A Hamilton pediatrician says about 30 per cent of local children with Reye's syndrome had their rooms painted one to two weeks before they came down with the rare disease.

Dr. R. M. Hurley of St. Joseph's Hospital said he has been asked by the provincial health department to supply more information about his observations.

Reye's syndrome is a rare children' disease that affects the central nervous system and is frequently fatal within days.

In the last few years there has been a suspicion that it was linked to spruce budworm spraying in the Maritimes. But is is also known to be more common during viral epidemics such as influenza and chicken pox.

"I don't know what it could be in fresh paint, and I stress that any association is absolutely unproven, it's just my clinical observation," Hurley said.

"But I know I certainly don't paint around my house during the flu season.

"It is such a rare disease that it seems odd that a history of recent painting would show up so often in these children."

Hurley, also an associate professor of pediatrics at McMaster University, said he was at the first international conference on Reye's syndrome last year in Halifax and came away "with the gut feeling that it probably involves a susceptible host who gets infected with a virus like chicken pox or flu and then is exposed to some environmental factor."

Mortality rates from the disease range from 20 to 80 per cent.

★★★ Pork is a great meat for barbecuing too!

Barbecued pork steak?

Oh just simply delicious and economical, too! Best way is to use your favourite barbecue sauce. (You can make some super ones from soup mixes and salad dressings.) First slash the edges on the fat to keep the steaks flat. Grill over medium hot coals for about 15 min. Turn and baste with sauce for about 15 mins. more. You might just pig out on it.

Tossed Salad with Bacon and Blue Cheese

4 slices bacon, crisp-cooked, drained and crumbled
1 clove garlic — ¼ cup salad oil
6 cups crisp salad greens (have well chilled)
1 cup seasoned croutons — ¼ cup crumbled blue cheese
2 to 3 tbsp. cider or wine vinegar — salt and pepper to taste
1 small mild onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings

Prepare bacon; set aside. Add garlic to oil and allow to stand for 3 hours. Just before serving, tear well chilled salad greens into bite-sized pieces and place in salad bowl. Add croutons and blue cheese. Remove garlic from oil; discard garlic. To oil, add vinegar. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pour dressing over salad. Add onion rings. Toss to coat all salad ingredients evenly with dressing. Sprinkle reserved bacon over top of salad. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Canada third in productivity gains

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada ranked third among the world's seven leading industrial countries in manufacturing productivity gains registered during 1978, the U.S. labor department reported Tuesday.

The productivity of workers in Canadian manufacturing industries, a key factor affecting inflation, rose 4.2 per cent.

By contrast, productivity by Japanese workers rose 8.3 per cent last year, highest among the seven industrialized countries. France was second with a 4.9-per-cent gain, West Germany fourth at 3.7 per cent, Italy fifth at 2.9 per cent, the United States sixth at 2.5 per cent and Britain seventh at 1.6 per cent.

A rise in productivity, which measures units of output per hour, can offset the impact of higher wages paid workers because the increased labor costs are spread among a larger number of produced goods.

However, if productivity fails to keep pace with rising wages, unit labor costs increase, and thus prices rise.

The labor department said hourly compensation for manufacturing industries in Japan rose by 6.3 per cent last year, less than in any of the other seven countries. Combined with the high productivity gain, the relatively small wage increases resulted in an actual decline in unit labor costs for Japan, the only country reporting a decrease.

Hourly compensation rose by a high of 16.9 per cent in Britain. Italy was second with compensation up 13.9 per cent followed by France, 13 per cent; the U.S., 9.5 per cent; West Germany, 7.2 per cent and Canada, 7 per cent.

Unit labor costs in Britain were up 15.1 per cent, followed by Italy, 10.6 per cent; France, 7.7 per cent; the U.S., 6.9 per cent; West Germany, 3.4 per cent and Canada, 2.7 percent. In Japan, unit labor costs declined by 1.8 per cent.

Exposure pleases chiefs

TORONTO (CP) — The 300 Indian chiefs who went to Britain last week in an attempt to ask the Queen to block attempts to change the Canadian Constitution got international coverage for their cause, the president of the National Indian Brotherhood said Tuesday.

Noel Starblanket said it now is up to Prime Minister Clark to ensure that Indians have a voice in any revision of the constitution.

The chiefs spent last week in London to push their plea that the British Parliament hold up patriation of the British North America Act, the Canadian constitution.

Starblanket said the next move is three-fold.

First, he said he thinks a meeting of brotherhood executives will be arranged this week with Clark and Jake Epp, minister of Indian affairs and northern development, on whether the Indians will have a seat at the Constitutional conference this fall.

Second, the brotherhood will seek invitations to the Socialist International meetings in Stockholm July 20-21 and the Commonwealth conference in Zambia Aug. 1-8.

RCMP break-in reports 'brushed over'

OTTAWA (UPC) — Retired RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon has told the McDonald Commission he brushed over reports the force was involved in a 1972 break-in at a leftist news agency in Montreal because they resembled many other allegations levelled against the federal force.

"It seemed like one of many allegations and until it was confirmed the RCMP took part it didn't bother me," Nadon, who was then acting-commissioner, told the commission investigating RCMP wrongdoing Tuesday.

The agency sent a letter advising the Quebec and Montreal police forces and the RCMP of the incident in October, 1972. Nadon passed the letter on to security services for investigation but didn't follow up until 1974 when it was learned Const. Robert Samson was involved.

Nadon also passed over department memos warning of "poor supervision" in the delicate case. "These charges did not concern me. I thought the case was delicate because of the several police forces involved ... not because of any operational problems."

The full extent of the RCMP involvement came to light when the cabinet released top secret evidence in 1976 saying the federal force had broken into the offices and removed 1,000 documents.

"I passed the information on and assumed security would take care of it. I was not aware that Mr. Allmand was briefed about the break-in by Commissioner William Higgitt either," he told the hearing.

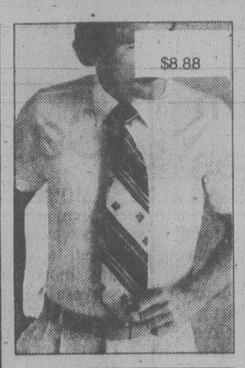

Earlier and conflicting testimony from Higgitt shows he briefed Allmand in 1972.

Nadon's testimony followed a day of evidence from Gen. Michael Dare, director-general of Security Services, who urged the government to establish a committee of experts familiar with the RCMP to draw up guidelines on intelligence procedures and an intelligence policy.

Until now the security and intelligence section has worked independently with no formalized policy other than a general mandate that all procedures must be carried out within the law.

Exploding bottles still being sold

By PAUL WHITELAW
FP News Service

OTTAWA — Exploding 1.5-litre soft drink bottles that have caused blindness and other serious injuries are still being sold despite a two-week old government call for a voluntary ban.

The Consumers' Association of Canada (CAC) has charged that the hazardous bottles are still on sale in many corner stores and even a few chain outlets.

A senior official of the Consumer Affairs department conceded the allegation appears accurate but Ottawa won't act on the association's call that the containers be immediately outlawed.

CAC president Yvonne Miles said Tuesday it is now clear the June 28 request of Consumer Affairs minister Allan Lawrence for voluntary recall of hazardous bottles "has not resulted in the hoped-for elimination of the products from retail stores."

Although the response of a large number of supermarket chains has been "prompt and positive," Miles charged that many independent grocers and some chain stores have ignored the warning.

Since Lawrence's request was issued at an Ottawa news conference, the Consumer Affairs department has been checking with companies that bottle major soft drink brands to monitor implementation of the voluntary ban.

Jim Black, director of the department's product safety branch, said Tuesday that bottlers have been co-operative.

An aide to Lawrence noted that new standards for soft drink bottles are being drafted.

But those standards won't become law until later this summer and aide Carol Labelle said an immediate banning order is unlikely.

Lawrence insisted at the June 28 news conference it would be impossible to quickly draft an order that would be sufficiently precise to affect only hazardous containers without banning other bottles considered to be relatively safe.

Black said new standards, which Lawrence predicted might become law by late summer, could be in sooner.

Tests by the Consumer Affairs department on 1.5-litre bottles of Pepsi, 7-Up, Canada Dry, Pure Spring, Royal Crown and Orange Crush showed a nearly 100 per cent explosion rate.

Takeover loss of $3.6M seen

MONTREAL (CP) — Asbestos Corp. would lose at least $3,630,000 if the company's assets were illegally expropriated by the Quebec government, a senior corporate officer indicated Tuesday.

George McCammon, vice-president for finance, testified the main costs would arise because a state takeover would require a change in the company's trademark and transfer of the head office from Montreal to Thetford Mines, Que., where the company's main mine is located.

McCammon was testifying at a Quebec Superior Court hearing.

Last-born quad dies

TORONTO (CP) — Maria Naziris, last-born of Soteris and Vasoulla Naziris' quadruplets, has died.

The infant died Monday one month after her birth.

The remaining three babies are still in hospital — George and Andrea in fair condition and Theodora in good condition.

Naziris said Tuesday he is digging into his life savings to keep the family going.

Canada Day hush-up

MONTREAL (CP) — A promotional firm which organized a July 1 concert where Canada Day was not supposed to be mentioned likely won't do any more business with the federal secretary of state, a department official said Tuesday.

Gary McKeehan, a special assistant to Secretary of State David McKeehan, said that the company, Kebec-Spec, "went way beyond its mandate and distorted the purpose of the event" when it included a clause in its contract with three Quebec pop singers that stipulated that there would be no mention of Canada Day during the concert.

The clause was not in the Festival Canada contract with Guy Latraverse, owner of Kebec-Spec, McKeehan said. "It was only in his contract with the performers."

Singers Diane Dufresne, Claude Dubois, Nanette Workman and Robert Charlebois insisted Canada Day not be mentioned during the $207,000 show which was cancelled due to bad weather.

Alberta breweries reopen

EDMONTON (CP) — Supplies of Canadian beer should be more abundant in Alberta after the reopening today of three breweries.

Labatt's in Edmonton, Carling O'Keefe in Calgary and Molson's in Lethbridge resumed production. Labatt's and Molson's agreed to lift layoff notices because of a ruling Monday by the Alberta board of industrial relations that a similar layoff at Carling was illegal.

Only Molson's Edmonton plant remains shut because of a two-week-old strike by its 91 employees.

Retail stores at the three plants which resumed operation were to be open for business today.

Retail outlets at the breweries will be the only source of supply for beer drinkers since beer stores remain closed due to a lockout by the Alberta Brewers' Agents of its 180 employees throughout the province.

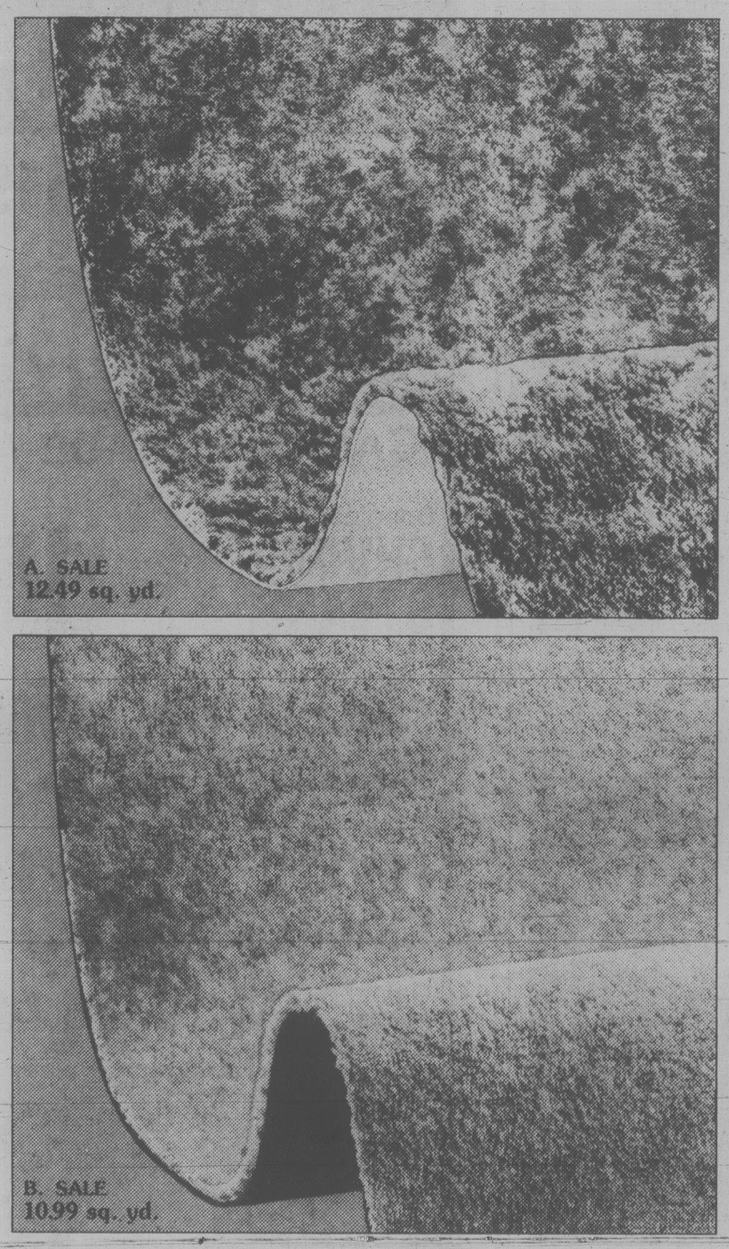

The distribution company, which delivers beer from breweries to liquor stores and hotels, has been closed for more than a week.

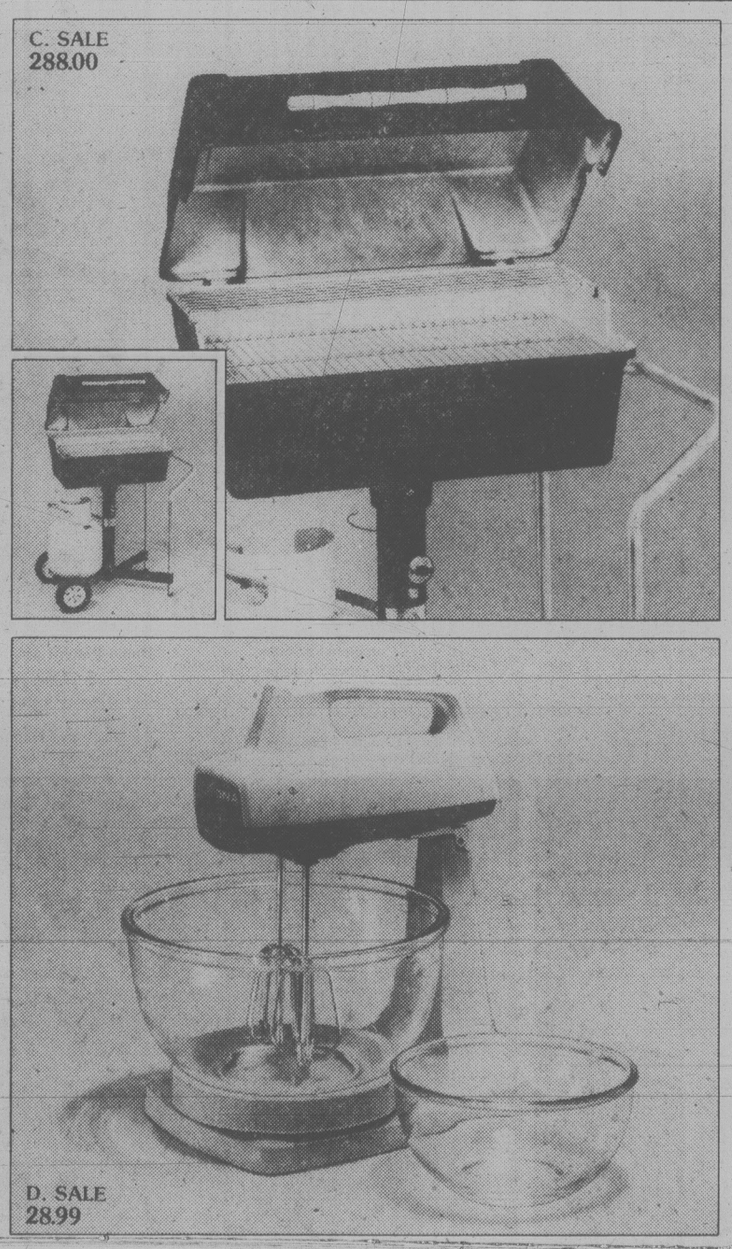

The board of industrial relations made a precedent-setting ruling Monday when it found that a layoff of employees at Carling Calgary was an illegal lockout because a valid contract was in force.

Carling was ordered to rescind layoff notices and have workers back on the job by 7 a.m. today.

It was the first time in Alberta history a company's action during a labor dispute has been ruled illegal.

One of the best buys for barbecue lovers is pork and chops fit the bill

Pork makes the barbecue

The passwords to a great cookout are easy, economical and delicious.

Served indoors or outdoors, foods with the flavor of the barbecue fit the active, creative cooking style of our times. Also, a barbecue can give a style to family meals even if you're operating on a limited budget.

Pork is the word here. You'll find it one of the best buys the meat counter has to offer this summer.

Here are some tips to get the most out of your grill, fire and food.

Before starting the fire, whether it's gas, electric or charcoal, check the wind and position the grill so smoke won't bother you. Hardwood charcoal briquets give less smoke than charcoal. Lining grill with foil before adding charcoal makes for easier clean-up. (However, do not line gas grills.) A shallow layer of gravel in the bottom of a regular barbecue permits better draft and will catch drippings.

Always use tongs, not forks, so that meats are not pierced when handled and juices are retained. It's often a good idea to score edges of steak, chops or ham slices to prevent curling. When threading skewers, leave a small space between pieces of food to allow for heat penetration.

For succulent pork-over-the-coals always prepare the barbecue for a low-moderate temperature at grill. If you can hold your hand at grill level for the count of seven the temperature is just perfect for pork. If you have to pull it away at the count of five the fire is too hot. It might be right for beef but not for pork. To reduce the temperature of a charcoal grill, separate the briquets or chunks of charcoal and allow air to circulate around them or raise the grill.

TASTY THYME PORK CHOPS
Makes 4 servings

4 pork chops, loin rib, loin centre or shoulder, cut 1¼ inches thick
3 sprigs fresh thyme, crumbled or 1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 bay leaf, finely crumbled
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper

Arrange chops in a single layer on waxed paper or foil. Combine all remaining ingredients and rub evenly on both sides of meat. Leave at room temperature one hour. Barbecue pork on grill, over low-medium heat, turning frequently, 40 minutes or until meat is no longer pink on the inside.

LEMONY PORK CHOPS
Makes 6 servings

1 medium lemon, thinly sliced
⅓ cup soy sauce
½ teaspoon oregano
6 pork chops, loin rib, loin centre or shoulder, cut 1¼ inches thick

combine lemon, soy sauce and oregano in shallow (13x9x2") baking pan. Place chops in pan; let stand 30 minutes, turning once. Remove chops from marinade; drain well. Barbecue over low-medium heat about 20 minutes on each side or until cooked throughout and juices are no longer pink. Brush often with marinade during cooking.

GRILLED GARDEN VEGETABLES
Makes 4 servings

3 small zucchini, cut into ¼" slices
2 cups cauliflower florets
2 medium tomatoes, cut into wedges
1 medium onion, sliced
½ teaspoon basil
¼ teaspoon salt
Pinch of pepper
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

In the centre of a large square of aluminum foil, combine all ingredients except margarine. Join 4 corners of foil and mold foil close to vegetables. Barbecue on rack, over low-medium heat, 20-30 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Open foil; top each serving with 1 teaspoon butter or margarine.

POCKET CHOPS
Makes 6 servings

6 loin rib pork chops, about 1½ inches thick
1 tablespoon butter
1 medium onion, finely chopped
¼ cup finely chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sage
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 cups small bread cubes
Milk or water
Foil

Trim chops, if necessary. Cut a large gash or pocket horizontally into the side of each chop to the bone. Melt butter in frying pan. Saute onion and celery 3 minutes. Stir in parsley, salt, sage and pepper. Add bread cubes; stir well. Moisten with enough milk or water for dressing to stick together, but it should not be soggy. Fill pockets in chops with dressing. Wrap each chop in foil. Place on rack over low-medium coals. Cook 10 minutes on each side. Remove foil. Return chops to grill. Continue barbecuing, turning occasionally, about 30 minutes longer or until chops are browned on both sides and juices are no longer pink.

Tried a Caesar salad lately?

FOOD & nutrition

3 tablespoons oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 large head Romaine lettuce
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
4 finely chopped anchovy fillets
1 slightly beaten egg
1 cup croutons

Combine oil, lemon juice, garlic and Worcestershire sauce. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

Wash Romaine, drain well and dry with paper towels. Mix cheese, pepper, salt, mustard and anchovy fillets. Tear lettuce leaves into bite-sized pieces and sprinkle with cheese mixture. Remove garlic from oil mixture. Add oil mixture and egg to salad. Toss gently, but thoroughly.

Just before serving add croutons and toss again. Four servings.

Cold cucumber soup

3 medium cucumbers
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup diced carrot
⅓ cup butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 cups chicken bouillon
3 cups milk

Peel and seed cucumbers. Shred ⅓ cup cucumber for garnish. Cut remainder in ½-inch slices and saute with onion and carrot in butter about 5 minutes. Stir in flour and seasonings. Gradually add buillon and milk. Stir and cook until soup thickens (about 5 minutes). Pour into blender and blend until smooth. Chill. Garnish with shredded cucumber. Serve very cold. Supermarkets gearing up for the vegetarian revolt

North America is still a long way from becoming a continent of vegetarians. But at least one supermarket industry observer predicts a backlash in the 1980s against our long-standing meat-heavy diet.

It's already underway in some stores, according to Gerald Lewis, president of Creative Designs International, a New York City-based supermarket design company.

Lewis says some supermarkets now on the drawing boards will have larger sections for fresh produce to meet consumer demand created by nutritionists who tout fruits and vegetables for fitness and health.

This doesn't mean we're giving up meat, he added. "It's still a very, very important department," he said, adding that he sees no moves to reduce the size.

Delicatessen, bakery and fast-food take-out departments are also comers, industry spokesmen say, to meet the needs of working women who have less time but more money.

Designer Arnold Ward, president of Arnold Ward Studios of New York City, thinks supermarkets of the 1980s will be larger but simpler — as consumers in a tight economy become suspicious about the causes of price increases.

In a telephone interview, Ward said, "One thing that definitely arouses consumers' suspicions are store or chain operators remodeling or redecorating elaborately. If they spend $100,000 to decorate stores, customers question how the owners can afford to spend so much. They think they're being ripped off."

Ward thinks this attitude favors alternatives such as warehouse stores, which display products in cardboard shipping boxes and wire baskets and sell at a discount.

He says larger stores are a strong trend because, "one-stop shopping will be the way of the '80s."

One problem that won't go away is shoplifting.

A new system Ward's company plans for some clients combines customer and watchdog service:

It is "a platform with a public address system directly in the center of the checkstands," Ward said. "The store manager stands in the middle and directs the action, like the captain of a ship. He listens to complaints, oversees the front end and watches for shoplifters."

Ward adds that regular mirrors "make shoppers feel like crooks, something no supermarket man wants."

So some stores are installing a "catwalk security" system that uses concealed one-way mirrors instead.

Berry shopping? 'See red'

The strawberry season is here and it's time to take a few tips from the growers for serving the delicacies at their flavorful best.

Unlike many other fruits, strawberries do not ripen after they are picked. So be sure to "see red" when shopping for them.

Heat is a natural enemy of the strawberry. Refrigerate as quickly as possible to protect their texture. Wait until you are ready to use them before washing. Keep their caps on while washing to prevent water from diluting the flavor and changing the texture.

Try this Strawberry Shortbread Mousse. A heavenly pink cloud of strawberries and cream sits on top of a shortbread cookie crust. It's a luscious, make-ahead dessert.

STRAWBERRY SHORTBREAD MOUSSE

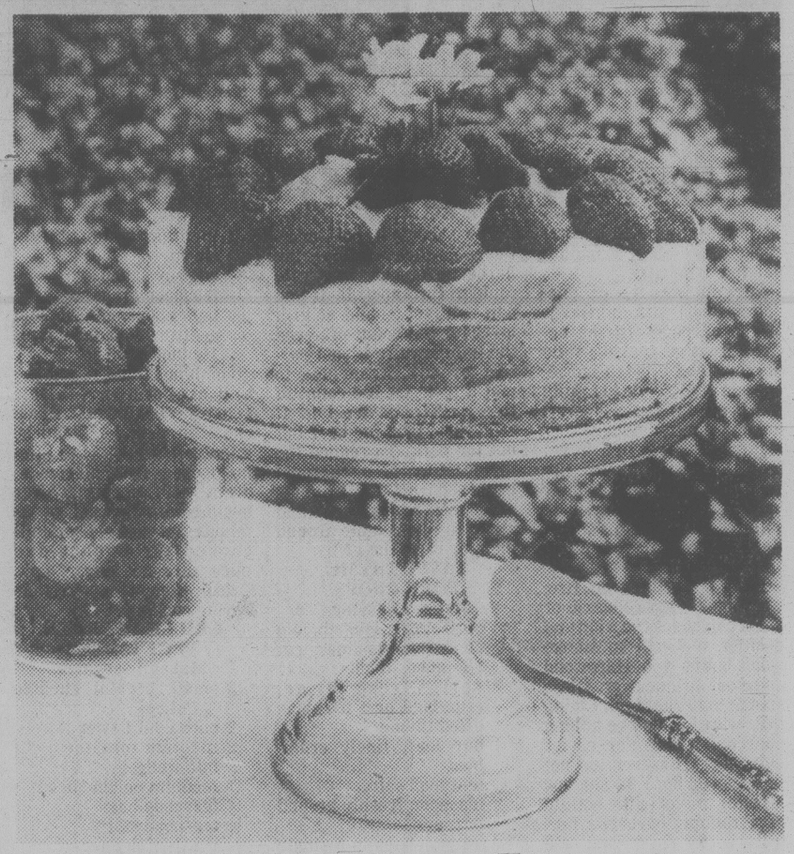

CRUST

½ cup butter or margarine, softened
¼ cup sifted powdered sugar
1 cup sifted flour

FILLING

2 pints fresh California strawberries
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¾ cup sugar
2 packages unflavored gelatin
¼ cup water
2 cups whipped cream, whipped

To prepare crust: cream butter and sugar. With fork, gradually stir in flour. Pat dough into bottom of 8½ or 9-inch spring form pan. Prick with fork. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven 10 minutes. Lower heat to 300 degrees; bake 20 to 25 minutes longer, or until golden. Cool. To prepare filling: puree enough berries (about 1½ pints) in blender to make 2 cups. Reserve remaining berries for garnish. Blend lemon juice and sugar into puree. Soften gelatin in water; warm over low heat to dissolve. Stir into berry puree; chill until mixture begins to thicken. Fold in whipped cream. Pour over crust; chill. Halve remaining berries; arrange cut side down around edge of mousse. Makes 8 servings.

Strawberry shortbread mousse is light in texture, rich in flavor

That good old fried rice

2 eggs
¼ cup green onions
½ cup frozen peas (optional)
½ cup of any of the following (cooked bacon, shrimp, chicken or ham)
3 cups of cooked long grained rice
2 tbsp. oil
2 tsp. soya sauce
pinch of salt

Cook rice ahead of time (one day), drain, cover and refrigerate. Break eggs, stir, fry one at a time and cut into thin strips. Set aside. Fry onions, then add meat and peas.

In a second pan, fry rice in 2 or more tbsp. oil on moderate heat, stirring it thoroughly. Add salt and soya sauce.

Add eggs, onion, meat and peas. Mix until thoroughly heated. Serve at once.

Here's one for Popeye - spinach

Spinach — of all foods to feature in recipes! While many now grow spinach and eat it, there is perhaps a sense of duty connected with it. But many of us find it pleasant for there is spinach and SPINACH. Some you cannot buy in stores but can easily grow in a tub on a balcony or in a garden bed.

The most delicious and crisp is New Zealand Spinach; the next is King of Denmark Spinach. Seed of both have been for several years locally available.

Neither is like the smooth, soft kind you buy in cans. Both can be eaten, and enjoyed, uncooked as crisp green salading, and both can be quickly cooked to preserve flavor and crisp texture.

Spinach can be frozen for winter use if a surplus occurs, although in mild winters and in gardens sheltered from the worst of winter cold wind, the New Zealand continues to produce.

There is no preparation needed for the King of Denmark and New Zealand other than a quick rinse in cold water. The amount of water remaining on the leaves after one shaking is just right for steaming three to four minutes. Timing depends on how quickly your heat source causes steam to form. Keep pan cover on for quick cooking.

When wanted for an uncooked salad, rinse in cold water and pat dry in an old cotton dish towel.

The only real difficulty in preparing these spinach types is to estimate the quantity needed for a good serving to each person. A one-litre container filled with the uncooked vegetable and pressed down a little is about right for each adult when cooked. To arrive at this amount, I atuffed a one-litre milk carton with the short tips of New Zealand spinach and then dumped them into an open casserole to get an easier-to-use measuring gauge, and afterwards used the casserole to measure this bulky loose vegetable.

Now try Spinach Salad with the spinach steamed first. Use whatever kind you can get really fresh. No conversions needed from metric. Just use your metric measures.

SPINACH SALAD
(Use metric cup and spoons)

4 L spinach, steamed
5 ml soft margarine or oil
125 ml raisins
60 ml chopped or ground peanuts
1 ml salt (optional)
250 ml plain homemade yogurt

Steam the washed spinach three minutes as suggested above.

Drain off the little drop of moisture (keep for another use); add margarine or oil and toss. Add raisins and nuts, toss again lightly and cool.

Add yogurt, salt if wanted, and serve small bright red radishes, small whole cooked beets, or sliced ripe tomatoes as a salad. This is an interesting salad and quite delicious. Serves 4.

Another Spinach Salad this time raw, with hard boiled eggs.

SPINACH SALAD WITH EGGS
(Use metric cup and spoons)

2 L spinach, raw
5 ml chopped chives
15 ml sunflower oil (salad oil) vinegar
salt and pepper to taste
3 hard boiled eggs

Wash, and pat dry the spinach. Cut into bite size pieces; mix in bowl with chopped chives.

Shake oil with few drops vinegar, and a very little salt and pepper in small bottle. Pour over salad and toss with two forks.

Slice the hard boiled eggs and spread over the salad. Serves 4.

Now for a family meal using several early-summer vegetables, including spinach and serving with new potatoes, young carrots, amd perhaps cold fillet fish if yours is a fishing family.

SAVORY SPINACH

2 shallots sliced thin OR 1 small onion
soft margarine
1 thick slice soft stale wholewheat bread
2 L spinach
vegetable stock

Scrub small potatoes for number of servings. Some of the skin will flake off but don't scrape. Same with young carrots—use a fairly soft brush to clean.

Cook both vegetables in one saucepan with minimum boiling water for 15 to 20 minutea only until a fork pierces the pieces.

Add few grains salt.

In skillet or frypan, cook sliced shallots (or onion) in a little margarine until soft and yellow; add finely crumbled wholewheat bread (with crusts). Stir and cover until a little browned with low heat.

Wash and cut spinach into small pieces.

Add a little vegetable stock to onion and bread mix (or use potato and carrot water if those vegetables are tested as done.)

Pile spinach into skillet or pan; turn up heat to cook the spinach in three minutes after steaming begins.

Serve hot potatoes and carrots on plates, with spinach and its thick brown gravy (from the onion and breadcrumbs).

Each vegetable retains its distinctive flavor. That is part of the pleasure (and profit) of cooking and eating at home.

If you have a favorite place for eating out away from home, ask for a spinach dish. You may get something delicious or you may be prompted to grow your own. it can still be done, this year.

Pre-game steaks no good for jocks

If you are athletic, you don't need a diet of high class protein, like steak, to improve performance.

In fact, protein is not the best source of energy for the body. There is no point in loading up with protein before a competition. So forget the traditional pré-game steak.

Athletes need more energy-producing foods than non-athletes. The amount of the athletes' daily exercise determines how much higher their needs are. Fat, carbohydrate, protein and alcohol all provide energy in the form of calories.

Before a competition, carbohydrates such as pasta and rice are recommended. These are digested quickly, so that the stomach and top part of the intestine are empty before a competition. Foods high in fat (e.g., red meats, eggs, cheese) or in fibre (e.g., whole grain cereal products) leave the stomach at a slower rate.

It is important for athletes to enter competition with an adequate supply of water in their tissues, because they will lose a lot of water through perspiriation. Avoid salty and protein-rich foods, caffeine and alcohol. Salty food causes water rentention; the others drain water from the tissues.

The best diet for an athlete is one that follows Canada's Food Guide, supplemented with nutritious, high calorie foods. A nutritious diet includes meats and their substitutes (fish, eggs, cheese legumes), fruits and vegetables, milk and dairy products, and breads and cereals.

Any severely restricted diet, such as a high protein one, is likely to be nutritionally inadequate and probably won't increase performance.

Don't fuss when Billy won't eat

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dedicated moms who force food down their children's throats are meeting their own needs rather than those of their children, says Edmonton pediatrician Dr. Adrian Jones.

Dr. Jones spoke about nutrition, appetite control and the feeding of young children at the annual conference of the Canadian Public Health Association in Winnipeg last week.

He said that for some reason, mothers think children need to eat a certain amount of food three times a day in order to be healthy. If the child doesn't co-operate, a mother can feel upset, insulted, and rejected.

Family doctors are constantly hearing mothers complain, "but he never seems to eat" or "she eats like a bird" or "he's always too busy playing to sit down and eat," Dr. Jones said.

Surveys show mothers complain five times as much about their children eating too little, as about them eating too much, he added.

Often, mothers have a preconceived idea of what their children's physique should be — short and chunky or tall and stout, for example.

"Eating too little is often managed by bribery, entreaty, threat, punishment and force," he said.

Dr. Jones noted that during the first three months of life, a baby eats so much and grows so quickly that if he were to continue at the same rate he would weigh 525 pounds and be about 14 feet tall by the time he was 18.

By the age of two or three, however, a child changes from a voracious eater who gulps down milk and grabs the spoons to feed himself to a typical "picky eater."

It's then that parents can become frustrated, abuse the child, plead, beg, or ask for a tonic from the doctor to stimulate appetite.

As a general rule, Dr. Jones said, there is no need to worry about a child's appetite as long as he is active.

Parents should remember it's normal for appetite to decrease after about one year, and that their children may refuse meals.

"Give him one pea, one piece of this and one piece of that. If he wants seconds, give him seconds. But don't force him, and don't make a big fuss about eating."

A child should be offered nutritious between-meal snacks such as raw fruit, vegetables, milk and peanut butter, and not candy, after a missed meal.

"Some mothers fill their children up with cookies, chips or juice between meals to compensate for the assumed food deficiency, thus rewarding the child for not eating previously and laying the groundwork for real nutritional deficiencies later on."

Studies show that in poor families, economics, past experience and limited knowledge of nutrition all affect food selection and result in a monotonous diet.

"The poor may skimp on food, a budget item where they have some choice, in order to spend mony on a luxury item. This may be frowned upon by the more affluent who, however, do not have to make that choice."

YOUR HEALTH
by L. L. Coleman, MD

Wrong route to his heart

A young bride and her new husband of three months were visiting in my office. They seemed to radiate happiness and obviously enjoyed their newfound blessings. When I asked her how she was enjoying married life, she said, half facetiously, "It's fine because I learned from my mother that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach."

The implication was clear. No matter how uncertain the going is romantically, if you can just make sure that your man is plied with succulent fried chicken, light-as-a-feather corn fritters and melt-in-your-mouth strawberry shortcake, then a tender and beautiful married life is inevitable.

Unfortunately for the gustatorial appetites of reluctant Romeos, modern science has put a totally different interpretation on the time-worn axiom: "The way to a man's heart is through his stomach."

There is a sneaky kind of validity to this statement. For that which does go into the stomach can indeed affect the heart — and the blood vessels, too, that supply it with nourishment. Large quantities of fattening foods puts on weight. This increased weight adds a burden to the heart and increases the chances for heart trouble.

Medical and insurance statistics point to the undeniable fact that overweight people do not live as long as those who eat in moderation and maintain a sensible weight. These same statistics emphasize that the obese are far more prone to serious diseases. High blood pressure, stroke and diabetes are far more prevalent in the obese.

Yet, in spite of all the warnings against the abundant living, and in spite of the constant barrage of nutritional education, far too many people cannot or will not give up their uncontrolled overeating.

The young husband in my office had already put on 10 extra pounds. He undoubtedly would have continued to gain under his wife's tender, loving care had I not disrupted them both from their complacency. I pointed out that at this rate of gain, by the time the husband was middle-aged he would have a good-sized pot belly. That would be clearly visible. But not so visible would be the fat that was accumulating around his heart and adding a distinct hazard to his health and to his longevity.

I felt that I had given this young couple a delayed wedding gift, one that would continue to bring them a better chance for good health and happiness.

It came as a startling revelation that they had already laid the groundwork for serious health problems for both of them in the years to come. It was reasonable to assume that the fattening dinners that she was preparing for her husband were being consumed by her, too.

Overeating is one of man's greatest threats to himself. The real way to a more healthy heart is through a stomach less filled with calories and fat.

Can the size and shape of blood vessels be seen by X-ray? — Miss K.R.

DEAR MISS R.:

Routine X-rays normally do not reveal the blood vessels unless there is marked arteriosclerosis in the arteries. There are now many remarkable techniques (angiograms) by which the blood vessels of the heart, lungs, brain and the general circulation can be clearly visualized by means of special dyes and X-rays.

Old Dad needs protecting?

DEAR ABBY: At 82, father is becoming increasingly frail and forgetful. He has substantial means and has lived alone with a housekeeper since Mother died five years ago. I am his only child (a daughter) with a family of my own. I've invited him to live with me but he's reluctant to give up the home he's lived in for so many years.

Now the problem: Some former friends who wronged Dad in business years ago have suddenly started to visit him regularly. They've introduced him to a young member of their family and he has become quite infatuated with her. The dollar signs in her eyes are obvious to me, but not to Dad. I don't want to deprive my father of any real happiness in his last years, but neither do I want him to fall prey to these opportunists I do not trust. What, if anything, should I do? — CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: How much your father should be protected "for his own good" and whether he's competent to make his own decisions are proper questions to discuss with his lawyer and physician. In the meantime, spend as much time with your father as possible but resist the temptation to bad-mouth his new friends.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps you will put this letter in your own words and tell my husband that he needs help. He won't listen to me.

He is 60 pounds overweight and, to make matters worse, a diabetic. He has a wonderful family who loves him very much. Whenever one of us reminds him that he needs to lose weight, he says, "So if I die, you will be left well-off."

Please, please, help us to help him. He is a dear and wonderful person. I want him around to see his grandchildren grow up, and he won't be around if he doesn't take better care of himself. — HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: An obese person knows he needs to lose weight and being constantly reminded of it will only make him feel guilty — which will make him feel rotten, which will cause him to eat to feel better.

If he chooses to dig his own grave with his fork, no one can stop him. But if he really wants to help himself, let him write to me and I'll tell him what to do.

DEAR ABBY: Some of us older folks don't move as fast as we used to, so you'd be doing us big favor if you would pass this suggestion on to those responsible for the sound effects on TV programs. When a telephone rings, I wish they'd use a more unique sound, such as a buzzer, or a beeping sound that is common in European phones. Anything but the familiar telephone bell most of us have at home.

Frequently while watching TV, I've struggled out of my easy chair to answer my phone to discover that it wasn't ringing at all. It was a ringing phone on the television!ARTHRITIC ARTHUR

Hormone synthesized

By VICTOR COHN
Washington Post

California scientists using the latest techniques in genetic engineering have synthesized human growth hormone, a discovery that could lead to production of the chemical that enables dwarfed children to reach normal height.

The synthesized hormone might also prove valuable in healing burns, wounds, bleeding ulcers and broken bones and in combatting bone deterioration or osteoporosis in the aging.

Small-scale studies have indicated that the human growth hormone — somatotropin — might promote cell growth and healing in all these conditions.

But at present the hormone can only be obtained in minute amounts from the pea-sized pituitary glands of cadavers. The total supply is so small that almost all of it must be used to help children who are failing to grow because of pituitary deficiency.

In fact, treatment of some of the children must be delayed for several years — and they may never reach full growth potential — because of the short supply. The synthesized hormone could increase the supply.

"That's one reason we think this development is so exciting," Dr. John Baxter of the University of California at San Francisco said in an interview Tuesday.

Synthesis of the hormone by a group under Drs. Baxter and Howard Goodman, and including Drs.Joseph Martial and Robert Hallewell, was disclosed by the university.

A report on a similar synthesis at Genentech, Inc., of Palo Alto, Calif., was made Tuesday by Drs. David Goeddell and Peter Seeburg at a biochemistry conference at Johns Hopkins University.

Persons who suffer from an inborn deficiency of growth hormone have been commonly known as "pituitary dwarfs," though doctors prefer the term "growth hormone deficiency," to describe their condition.

Such children and adults rarely grow taller than three to four and a half feet, but have bodies and limbs of normal proportions. There is also an unrelated short-limbed form of dwarfism caused by bone disease.

If treatment starts early enough, a pituitary-deficient child may expect to reach a normal height. Doctors sometimes halt treatment when height reaches about five feet, however, just so they can treat other children in need of the scarce substance.

Bubonic victim in Oregon

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A 12-year-old girl has been sent to hospital in Lakeview, Ore., with bubonic plague, the state health division said Tuesday.

Officials said the girl, who has been in hospital since June 30, is responding well to treatment.

Health officials said the source of the disease hasn't been determined but that the girl said she had handled baby jack rabbits prior to becoming ill.

Dr. Laurence Foster, deputy state epidemiologist, said the plague often is carried by wild rodents and that fleas who have been in contact with the rodents can transmit the disease to humans.

Second pipeline fire

ABADAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian authorities today reported a second fire in five days in the pipeline system feeding the world's largest oil refinery.

The new fire broke out Tuesday night near the town of Darkhuyen, 60 kilometres north of the Abadan refinery. Officials said firefighters from three cities quickly extinquished the blaze.

An official of the national Iranian oil company said the fire was not the result of an explosion, but of an unexplained rupture in the line. He said the line, which brings 60,000 barrels of crude oil daily to the refinery, would be back in operation later in the day.

On Saturday, a still-unexplained explosion struck an oil line 80 kilometres northeast of the refinery. That line is not expected to be repaired for five more days, officials said.

Rhodesia 'legal' in new U.K. plan

By LEONARD DOWNIE and JAY ROSS
Washington Post

LONDON - The British government Tuesday promised a new plan for restoring Zimbabwe-Rhodesia to legality and making the multi-racial government of Bishop Abel Muzorewa acceptable to the rest of the world.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's foreign secretary, Lord Carrington, announced that, as a result of preliminary consultations with African leaders, Britain intended "to make firm proposals of our own to bring Rhodesia to legal independence on a basis which we believe should be acceptable to the international community."

Those proposals would include changes in Muzorewa's government and constitution to reduce the power reserved for Rhodesia's three per cent white minority, according to British government officials. They said Thatcher and Carrington will urge Muzorewa in meetings here later this week to seek changes in constitutional provisions preserving white control over the military, police,civil service, judiciary and the process for amending the constitution.

According to one well-informed British official, Lord Harlech, Britain's special emissary to Rhodesia's black African neighbors and Nigeria, found that some of their leaders might accept Muzorewa's government if sufficient constitutional changes were made. The official would not name these leaders.

"They don't rule Muzorewa out if he demonstrates that he is in charge and makes those changes," the official said. "Some of them acknowledged that there had to be some special protection of whites - as there was when they were granted independence from Britain - but they felt the Rhodesian constitution just went too far."

Although officials here acknowledged that Muzorewa does not believe he can get the necessary support from Rhodesia's whites to make the constitutional changes, they still believe he can be convinced otherwise. The British foreign office has received an informal report that some influential Rhodesian whites were ready to agree to changes, so long as their security was not compromised, and were waiting for Muzorewa to ask them.

British officials have little hope, however, that the plan they devise will be acceptable to the Patriotic Front rebels led by Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, who are continuing their guerrilla war against Muzorewa's goverment from bases in neighboring Zambia and Mozambique.

Muzorewa, Carter confer

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Carter and Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa of Zimbabwe Rhodesia hold an unprecedented meeting today after staking out public positions that gave little hope for improved relations between their countries.

Both sides indicated Tuesday their positions are far apart.

The White House said the meeting would be brief, and Carter would discuss with Bishop Muzorewa steps needed to bring about genuine majority rule in Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

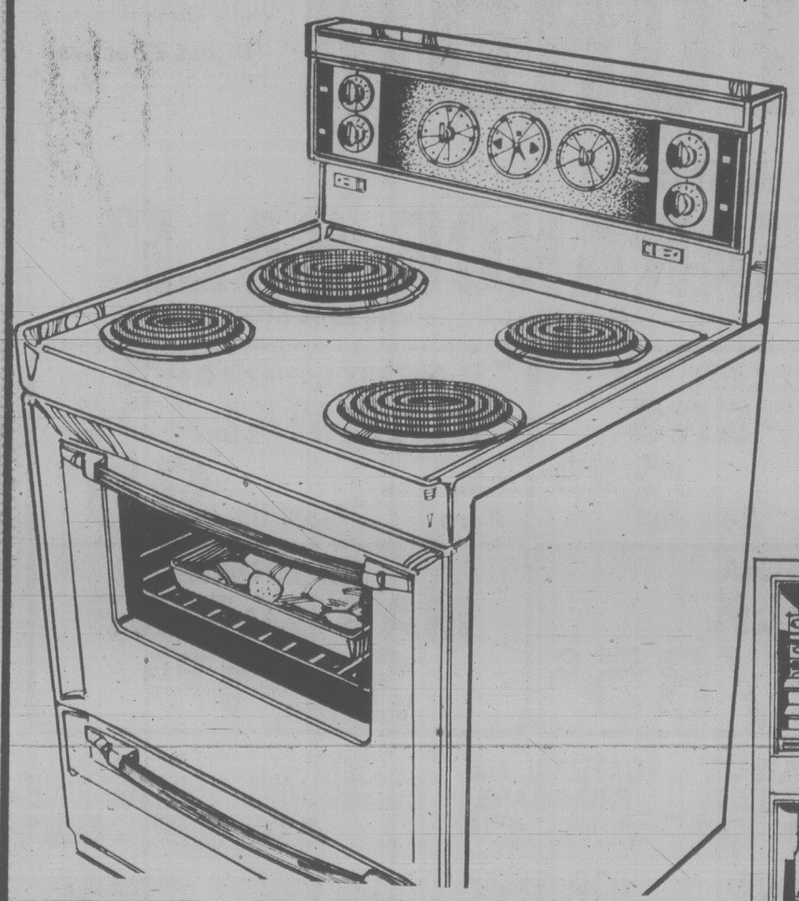

"I don't have to take any further steps," Muzorewa said Tuesday. "I've done what needs to be done."

'Tour of lifetime' stranded

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — A group of tourists — including four Canadians — in a remote corner of Botswana prepared Tuesday to hitchhike across barren southern African scrubland, hoping to restart what had been promoted as the holiday of a lifetime.

The tourists have been stranded for two weeks without transportation at Kasane in northern Botswana.

They had hoped Zambian authorities would relax a ban on non-Zambians crossing the Zambesi River by ferry, enabling them to continue a planned 17-week overland trip across Africa.

But in a telex message from Kasane on Tuesday, Dave Hill of Norwell, Mass., said: "Ferry no go. No transport. Expected to hitch to Francistown."

Francistown, about 480 kilometres (300 miles) south along a little-used dirt road, is the nearest railhead. Hill said the tourists have been told by the London-based tour organizers, Tracks, to catch a train from there to Johannesburg.

Tracks' South African agent said Monday the tourists would be invited to restart their "greak trek" by flying to Malawi, then travelling on to Zambia or Tanzania. But they would have to pay their own air fares.

In a message Tuesday to an elected tour spokesman who reached Johannesburg on Monday after a hitch-and-rail trip from Kasane, Hill said the flight proposal is unacceptable.

"But if we stay here, the driver and equipment will leave,," Hill said. "We are forced to go to Johannesburg or be left behind. We will fight the case on arrival in Johannesburg."

The driver is Tracks' only representative with the group. His truck, containing tents, food and other supplies, was sent on to Zambia by rail when it was thought the party would be able to cross by ferry.

Hill said the group now is forced to sleep three to a two-man tent and their food supply is diminishing. They will start hitchhiking when southbound transportation showed up, he said.

Of the original 20 tourists, Dale Baston of Vancouver and one Australian have returned to Johannesburg.

Other Canadians on the tour are Lina Forcier of Montreal; and Doug Donaldson and Jerry Hranka, both of Windsor, Ont.

The party paid about $1,650 U.S. each for the trip, plus $236 toward the food kitty to Tracks' Trans-African Expedition, of London, and Treasure Tours, of Australia.

Their brochure said: "Make a journey of a lifetime. Seventeen unforgetable weeks overland to London."

Three others — two Belgians and an Australian — are reported to have hitchhiked to Francistown.

Tracks' agent sent the party a message Tuesday saying any members who refused to leave Kasane would be regarded as having abandoned the tour and would forfeit their fees.

Soaring crime rate fault of weather?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. crime rate is soaring this year, with dramatic increases in murders, rapes and robberies across the country, the FBI reported Tuesday.

The FBI, which bases its statistics on reports from most local and state police agencies, said violent crime surged by 17 per cent during the first three months of 1979 compared with the same period a year ago, and property crimes rose by 11 per cent.

The over-all increase in serious crime was 11 per cent, with property crimes far outnumbering violent crimes.

The report prompted concern among federal officials and uncertainty as to the reasons for the sharp increase.

"There have been indications in recent quarters that the level of crime was rising, and this significant upswing is very disturbing," said Attorney General Griffin Bell. "The need for vigorous efforts at all levels of law enforcement to reduce the volume of crime, especially violent crime, is evident."

FBI spokesman Homer Boynton said there were no clear-cut reasons to explain the increase. But he said weather conditions during the first three months of 1979 were considerably milder in many sections of the country than in the last two winters and that may account for some of the upswing.

"When the winter is very severe, crime goes down. This winter it wasn't."

Some officials theorize that the economic downturn in the U.S. is contributing to a new crime wave. But Boynton said that while inflation is rising sharply, unemployment is down to less than six per cent.

Economic downturns in the past have been shown to have contributed to crime waves. FBI figures show that after a brief drop in 1972 the crime rate increased steadily as the country sank into a recession.

The crime rate dropped in 1977 and began to rise once again by the middle of last year. The FBI reported a four-per-cent increase during the last quarter of 1978, compared with the same period in 1977. There was a three-per-cent increase during the third quarter of 1978, compared with the same three months the previous year.

The latest statistics showed that during the first three months of this year the number of murders reported to the FBI rose nine per cent, forcible rapes 11 per cent, robbery 19 per cent and aggravated assault 17 per cent. In property crime, burglary was up eight per cent, larceny and theft 11 per cent and car theft 15 per cent.

Typhoons new threat to refugees

By MOIRA FARROW
FP News Service

SINGAPORE — Canadian immigration officers are sleeping on wooden tables and risk being washed overboard from small boats in their round the clock efforts to process Vietnamese refugees.

Soon they will have to cope with the typhoon season which is fast approaching and threatens more horror for the boat people afloat in the South China Sea.

"We have to be pretty resilient and the main thing is to hang on to your sense of humor," a senior immigration officer said Tuesday.

All the Canadian staff declined to have their names used.

What these men are up against is four Malayasian refugee camps, two of them on islands, and all bursting at the seams with boat people. More than 74,000 refugees are in the Malayasian camps alone, but the total registered refugees in Southeast Asia is now a staggering 360,000.

"I don't think the boat people coming over now will have much of a chance when the typhoons start," said one officer.

He said the logistics of processing the refugees — and Canada has so far taken 5,400 boat people — means that normal government working conditions and hours are abandoned.

The six staffers in Singapore work all hours of the day and night and have sea trips of up to four hours to reach some of the camps.

"Sometimes we have to stay overnight and we sleep on the same wooden table where we did our interviewing during the day," said one officer.

"You have to watch the sky carefully in case a storm comes up. We have lifejackets with us all the time. Sometimes in rough weather we've almost been washed overboard from the little boat going to the camps.

"The camp on the island of Bidong has 41,000 people and the island is only four kilometres square. It is so steep you can't pitch a shelter so the people are huddled together by the water. Almost all the original forest has been scavenged and there will be very little shelter in the typhoons."

The immigration staff has abandoned Canada's usual points system and they are allowed to use their discretion in selecting refugees far more than officers in other countries.

All the staff are enthusiastic about group sponsorships by Canadians because this allows them to admit additional refugees above and beyond the government limit. And group sponsorships allow them to admit boat people who don't have the necessary qualifications.

These are people who don't have skills or educational advantages and they are people who would be left behind on the beaches if we couldn't help them," said an officer.

At present, four Canadian national groups have signed agreements with the federal government to sponsor refugees. They are the Mennonites based in Winnipeg, the Presbyterian Church of Canada, the Council of Christian Reformed Churches and the Canadian Lutheran World Relief. World Vision of Canada, a humanitarian organization, is expecting to become the fifth national sponsor group any day now. And there are many other small groups also sponsoring boat people.

"These groups are very, very helpful to us and we'd like many more because they have great potential for helping the refugees make a smooth adaption to life in Canada," said an officer.

Hughes died of aspirin

New York Times

Since the funeral of Howard Hughes, there has been much speculation on the cause of his death. Some associates said an addiction to the tranquilizer Valium was the direct cause, while others said it was an addiction to the pain-killer codeine.

Now the reclusive millionaire's personal physician, Dr. Wilbur Thain says what led to the death of his patient was massive doses of aspirin.

"He was taking large doses of the over-the-counter analgesic, up to 20 to 30 tablets a day," Thain said in an interview in American Medical News, a publication of the American Medical Association. "It was the aspirin that killed him. The combination of dehydration and the massive amount of acetylsalisylic acid (aspirin) triggered the renal papillary necrosis (kidney poisoning) that caused his sudden death."

Refugee talks for MacDonald

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald will represent Canada at an international conference in Geneva next week aimed at solving the Southeast Asian refugee crisis, her department officials said Tuesday.

The fact that she is the only elected Canadian official going has upset Toronto Liberal MP Robert Kaplan who called her office to recommend that a delegation of members of Parliament be sent to the conference.

Kaplan said in a statement that MPs could be helpful in lobbying other countries to aid resettlement of the Southeast Asian refugees in addition to having a say in Canadian policy.

"I regret the minister's decision not to take a parliamentary delegation," Kaplan said. "I hope it's not a sign that Parliament will be excluded from immigration policy-making in the future."

External Affairs officials say there is no need to send a large delegation because representatives of each of about 60 countries in attendance will have only three to 10 minutes to speak.

Even Immigration Minister Ron Atkey is not going. "If one minister can do the job, why send two?" said an Atkey aide, adding that travel costs were a factor in deciding who goes.

Surfacing photographer almost went under . . .

TORONTO (CP) — Photographer Richard Leiterman was filming the Canadian movie Surfacing on Tuesday when he forgot the title and spent almost a minute under water.

Leiterman told actress Margaret Dragu to look frightened as they shot rapids while filming a scene on the Madawaska River about 125 kilometres west of Ottawa.

But Leiterman and Ms. Dragu both had a fright as their canoe overturned, dumping them into the fast-flowing river, said producer Beryl Fox.

Ms. Dragu and Leiterman were shooting the river scene on the third day of filming for the movie based on Margaret Atwood's best-selling novel.

Ms. Dragu was in the stern of the canoe and Leiterman was in the bow holding a 55-pound camera. Bob Morgan, a stunt man and expert canoeist, was controlling the canoe as it navigated the rapids.

After the canoe overturned, a rescue canoe and one used by the sound crew rushed to rescue Ms. Dragu and Leiterman. The actress, who plays the part of Anna, was quickly picked up but Leiterman remained under water clinging to his camera.

Ms. Fox said Leiterman was not trying to save the $20,000 camera, since it was insured, but he did not want to lose the film.

Finally, Leiterman bobbed to the surface and was pulled into a canoe.

The film was soaked but Leiterman decided it might be saved if it was kept in water and developed quickly. While it was packaged and flown to Toronto, filming resumed on the river.

Ed Asner has taken a shine to the news biz

Scott's World
By Vernon Scott

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — After two years of playing hard-boiled city editor Lou Grant on his TV series, stocky, beetle-browed Ed Asner concludes he wouldn't mind being a newspaperman if he weren't an actor.

The press corps generally is composed of competitive men and women who will do almost anything to get a story and, increasingly, often are involved in the drama of the stories they are writing, according to Asner.

That is what Lou Grant, the hour-long CBS-TV drama is all about.

Newspapermen also are wont to laugh at the antics of most dramatized films and TV shows wherein reporters are called "scoop" and editors holler "stop the presses" and "hold page one!"

Traditionally, newsmen are observers, reporting the events of the day whether it be a fire fight in a Middle Eastern war or a "leaper" on a building ledge. Rarely are they protagonists. Heroics don't go with the terrain.

But because Lou Grant represents an idealized version of journalistic verities, Asner has become a sort of champion of the print media.

He is in demand as a speaker at journalism conclaves and banquets. He is asked to stop by city rooms around the country to pose for photogs, sleeves rolled up, behind a desk, often with a fraternal arm around the editor.

He has addressed a convention of Sigma Delta Chi, the journalism society, the USC Journalism Awards banquet, a group of publishers in Portland, Ore., and a Family Weekly publishers meeting in Atlanta.

Asner likes newspapermen although newsmen not infrequently give him hell for occasional lapses on the show.

"By and large newspapermen are sympathetic and say I represent editors pretty well," Asner said during a shooting break at the CBS studios.

"The press feels misunderstood and unloved. Maybe with good reason. Newsmen aren't ranked high on popularity polls and are accused of not doing their jobs.

"Our show is composed of a bunch of decent actors trying to represent journalists as decently as possible, not as unprincipled snakes-in-the-grass as enemies of the press like to picture them.

"I think our fictitious paper, The Los Angeles Tribune, demonstrates the principles of what a great press can do and the moral conflicts that occur on any newspaper.

"We aren't passive observers. We'd have no show if that were the case. There's a certain amount of hype.

"Our cast is a catalyst of provocation within the stories being covered. There's drama and conflict behind the stories intertwined with the story itself. We show different viewpoints, little side issues, as to what is happening to newsmen during a breaking story.

"For instance, this week's episode deals with five men who die in a fire in a homosexual bar. It is based on an actual story. Moral question: do we print the names of the dead or not? Lou Grant decides we should."

Asner and Grant are brothers under the skin. Both are liberal, idealistic men who put principle above expediency.

The actor champions social issues and some unpopular causes, refusing to keep a low profile when to do so might better serve his career. He is a fanatic about protecting the First Amendment.

He contributes time and makes appearances on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union, the Political Rights Defense Fund (in a beef against the FBI). He also heads up UNICEF for the United Nations this year.

"I am a Jew who remembers he did not have to flee Hitler," he said. "I didn't have to survive the Hollywood blacklist. So I'm doubly blessed. But I must never let myself forget the people who did suffer from those things. I've got to pay back for the good fortune I've received."

Asner, whose only real brush with journalism was as a staffer for his Kansas City high school newspaper, believes he enjoys more freedom and clout as an actor than he would as a newspaperman.

"I wonder how free the press really is," he said. "The advertisers, the publishers, and the bosses under the publishers, make the big decisions.

"I got my first glimmer of that when I called Anita Bryant a looney at the Atlanta publishers' meeting. Half the publishers booed me. I knew then and there that the press isn't objective. There's censorship.

"It's far more important that newsmen are free than actors. But within the framework of my job as an actor I don't have to answer to so many people.

"There are more tough sergeants, restrictive brass and company commanders in the news field than in movies or TV. Personally, I'd like to see it otherwise."

And, according to Asner, so would Lou Grant.

Only the voice is familiar

SEATTLE (AP) — Marni Nixon's name may not be familiar — but her voice is.

She was the song on the lips of Deborah Kerr in The King and I, of Audrey Hepburn in My Fair Lady and of Natalie Wood in West Side Story.

West Side Story won the Academy Award for best picture in 1961; My Fair Lady was best picture in 1964 and Yul Brynner won the Oscar for best actor in 1956 for his role in The King and I.

Since the 1960s, Miss Nixon has appeared in a welter of stage shows, operas and recitals and has a stack of recordings to her credit.

But stardom has eluded the soprano. Her only personal appearance in a movie was as Sister Sophia in The Sound of Music, winner of the best picture Oscar in 1965.

"Sure, I would have liked to have a starring role," she said in a recent interview. "Not that I resented what I was doing but everybody has his dreams of becoming a movie star."

She was honored last fall by the National Association of Composers for "important contributions to musical life in the United States and the Los Angeles area."

In a study hangs a framed gold record, marking more than one million sales for a Walt Disney Mary Poppins record she cut. She has won five local Emmys for a Seattle TV show, Boomerang, in which she co-stars with a handful of puppets. She was nominated for a Grammy for her album of cabaret songs by Schoenberg.

Final betrayal by Britain, islanders say

SUVA, Fiji (CP) — When the Phoenix, Line and Gilbert islands gain their independence from Britain on Thursday, there will be no celebrating here by the 2,500 former residents of Ocean Island.

When the new Republic of Kiribiti comes into being with Princess Anne in attendance, the phosphate-rich Ocean Island is being included in the republic — against the wishes of its people. There currently are about 2,300 people on the island.

And the leaders of the people of Banaba — as they prefer to call Ocean Island — have pledged to continue the fight for their own independence.

Those who left the island moved to Rabi, an island in the Fijian group, in 1947 to enable phosphate to be mined on their ancestral homeland.

Since then they and many still remaining on Ocean Island have agitated for independence.

But both the previous Labor administration in Britain and the current Conservative government have rejected the claim for an independent Banaba while seeking to ensure that the position of the Banabans is safeguarded by the Gilbertese.

The Gilberts strongly opposed the Banabans' case for separation.

As far as the British are concerned, the story ended last month when the House of Lords rejected by 150 votes to 25 a move by Labor peer Lord Brockway to exclude Banaba from Kiribiti.

But as far as the Banabans are concerned, the battle is far from over.

Rev. Tebaiti Tawaka, spokesman for the exile community, said Britain had once again cheated the Banabans out of their birthright.

"Britain and her partners ripped the Banabans off for years," Tawaka said. "Now the British government has committed the final betrayal."

The world's latest independent country — which will be a republic within the Commonwealth — stretches across more than 4,300 kilometres of the south Pacific Ocean.

With the 200-mile-limit in force in the Pacific, Kiribiti, covering a land area of only 1,062 square kilometres, will be able to lay claim to more than five million square kilometres of territorial waters. It has no way of enforcing the claim.

The republic's only exports consist of phosphates from Ocean Island and copra. Britain has promised development aid of about $35 million in the first four years of independence.

Life simply isn't the same without the Times

By WILLIAM TUOHY
Los Angeles Times

LONDON — "There are many people in Britain," Louis Heren said, "who believe that their dear ones have not been properly passed on to wherever they are going if their deaths are not noted in the Times."

Heren, deputy editor of the Times of London, a newspaper that has not been published for seven months, stared at the empty newsroom and added:

"Our obituaries were known for their elegance. They were required reading for most subscribers. Somehow, dying in the Daily Telegraph or in the Guardian is just not the same."

Indeed, life for many British readers is not the same without the Times, which is known as "the Thunderer" because of its influential editorials, news stories and letters to the editor.

Although it had a circulation of only 330,000 when a dispute with production workers over the introduction of new technology shut the paper down last November, the impact was enormous.

As James Reston, a columnist for the New York Times, put it on a recent visit to the country from which he once reported:

"The Times (of London) was something more than a newspaper. It was a family circular letter. What it told its readers was not as important as what its readers told it about one another. It cared about life and death."

It prided itself on the range and balance that it brought to the coverage of domestic and foreign affairs. And its readers appreciated its objective tone in a country in which the press is often colored by political viewpoints.

But its readers valued other special qualities of the paper. The letters column was famous, as was its crossword puzzle, considered by afficionados to be the best in the world.

Of the letters column, British writer Anthony Sampson said:

"From its beginnings, the letters have provided a kind of debating chamber, an anteroom to Parliament, a source of independent views, reports, scoops, reflections or jokes, which are all a part of the machinery of free speech. There is no alternative to the threat: 'I'll write a letter to the Times.'"

Yet for seven months now the letters column — and the rest of it — has been missing from the London scene, and the other newspapers have not taken up the slack.

Negotiations between the paper's management and the unions have resumed, and hopes have risen that a settlement can be reached. But even after a settlement, insiders say, it could take several weeks before the paper reappears.

Its position in the London establishment is such that a senior aide to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, sitting in his office at No. 10 Downing Street, said the other day:

"The letters to the Times were like Chinese wall posters. It was the thing that people looked to to assess the mood of the country.

"I deeply miss the Times, and I don't know anyone in a senior position of government or business who doesn't. The other papers have utterly failed to fill the gap."

The other papers have tried, by increasing their press runs and adding pages. Still, even though Britons have many national dailies to choose from, the Times has left a huge gap in the country's journalist consciousness.

Of British newspapers, a Fleet St. wag once wrote:

"The Financial Times is read by the people who run the country.

"The Times is read by people who think they run the country.

"The Guardian is read by people who think they ought to run the country.

"The Daily Telegraph is read by people who think they ought to run the country but don't understand the Guardian.

"The Daily Express is read by people whose parents used to run the country.

"The Daily Mail is read by the wives of people whose parents used to run the country.

"The Morning Star (the Communist Party paper) is read by people who think their country ought to be run by another country.

"The Daily Mirror is read by people who aren't too sure of who is running the country.

"The Sun is read by people who don't care who is running the country as long as she's a pretty pinup girl."

For serious readers, the only quality papers left in this country are the Financial Times, the Telegraph and the Guardian. But many believe that the Guardian, which appeals to the trendy younger set, has allowed a heavy, left-wing bias to enter its news columns.

Conversely, the Telegraph appeals to a staunchly Conservative audience, and while it does have comprehensive news coverage, on political matters it often shows a distinctly Tory bias.

The Financial Times is highly regarded — a kind of British Wall Street Journal — yet, as one diplomat said, "The Financial Times gives me what I need but it doesn't give me all I want. Only the Times did that."

The diplomat said he thinks that the Times' crossword puzzle was one of its strongest assets. He said he used to relax with it after a long day at the Foreign Office sorting out the complexity of external affairs.

Heren, the deputy editor, agrees that the crossword puzzle is sorely missed.

"The experts say the Times' puzzle was the best availabe," he said. "It takes a cultivated person to work one. I myself was never able to finish the puzzle. However, 50,000 people have written in to us to take part, by mail, in our annual crossword-puzzle championship."

Heren said the paper held an important place in Britain as the paper of record.

"We have always tried to record those events that are important to many people," he said. "In addition to births and deaths, we printed the court circular, which details the royal schedules, as well as all sorts of promotions, honors and appointments in the military, diplomatic service and the educational fields."

The paper also printed major legal decisions. Since these decisions could not be printed by the official government office for weeks, the rulings as they appeared in the Times could be introduced by lawyers in court.

"Actually," Heren said, "the absence of the Times has slowed down the process of justice in Britain."

Similarly, the newspaper ran comprehensive accounts of parliamentary debate and speeches, and sometimes was the only source of such news the next morning. This was because the House of Commons often remains in session after midnight, which is too late to make the official record for the following day.

Thus, the place to read about what happened in Parliament after midnight was in the Times, and in turn the house of Commons singled it out for special consideration. Speakers in the Commons would refer generally to "newspaper report" but specifically to what "the Times says."

Ancillary media have also suffered from the paper's departure from the scene.

"The BBC (British Broadcasting Corp.) needs the Times as a kind of benchmark as to what constitutes significant news," one close observer of the media said. "Without the Times, the BBC sometimes seems to be floundering in its choice of news."

"If the surveys are correct," Heren said, "people have not forgotten us, nor have they given up on us. The surveys show that we really do fill a need for many people of this country."

The Economist, a respected magazine, headlined a recent article on the Times: "Missed More With Each Passing Day."

The official at No. 10 Downings Street summed up his remarks by saying:

"The Times has been very badly missed. We are a traditional society. The feeling about the Times is an elusive thing, but if the people think the Times is the best, then they're going to miss it when it is not around — and there is simply no replacement."

Britons betting bundle

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — This year Britons are expected to bet nearly £10 billion on horses, dogs, bingo, lotteries, football pools, cards, roulette, dice and even the weather.

They spend more on this pastime than they do on drinking and smoking, according to a report by Britain's newly elected Conservative Government.

More than 17 million people play the pools regularly during the soccer football season; four million play bingo and three million frequent betting shops. Nineteen out of 20 people gamble occasionally; eight of them regularly.

Britain's big three bookmakers and casino operators — Ladbrokes, Coral and William Hill — made more than £70 million profit between them in 1978, compared with less than £20 million in 1973.

Individual casinos, such as the national Playboy Club, sometimes make as much as £10 million profit a year, according to a royal commission on gambling. Yet the commission found that, contrary to public opinion, the majority of bookmakers do not make excessive profits.

"The promoters' average take last year was 11 per cent, and one-third of that went in taxes," the commission said. "Casinos account for more than half of all gambling turnover and have the smallest edge over the gambler — only 2½ per cent."

Race betting comes next, taking nearly one-third of all gambling money, with the bookies' edge varying from 12 per cent on the race course to 19 per cent in betting shops.

At the bottom of the table came football pools with less than five per cent of gambling turnover. But the pool promoters and Britain's heavy income tax cream off 70 per cent of all the money staked.

"The odds against winning £250,000 for 50 pence on the pools are about three million to one," says the Conservative Government report. "The odds against winning any prize are considerable."

The Grim Ripper haunts the Moors

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press

There's a cliche of British comic theatre in which the bumbling inspector sidles up to the suspect and demands:

"Where were you, on the night of. . . ."

Suddenly, for 3,000 British men, that question isn't funny anymore.

It means, for each, that a neighbor, relative, colleague, friend or enemy has telephoned police to report "he could be the Yorkshire ripper."

More than 3,000 telephone calls have poured in to police during the last week, ever since the authorities played a tape recording for the public and pleaded "if you know that voice, get in touch with us."

George Oldfield, assistant chief constable for West Yorkshire, believes the soft Tynside "Geordie" accent on the tape is that of the man who has killed 11 women, almost all of them prostitutes, during the last four years.

It's a hunt that has become personal for Oldfield. The tape was addressed to him.

On it, the voice sounds wistful, almost sorry for the victims, as it muses:

"They never learn, do they George?"

Police estimate that millions, listening on radio and watching on television, heard the man boasting "I'll keep on going for quite a while."

Then the calls began. Police set up incident rooms in Halifax — scene of the most recent killing, last April — and in Leeds and Sunderland.

The finger of suspicion has been pointed at local men and men living as far away as Cornwall and Ireland.

Supt. Dick Holland, head of the ripper squad, says "So far, the response has been very good."

The Yorkshire ripper has said he'll strike next — likely some time this year — in Manchester, where there are an estimated 400 prostitutes.

There, Detective Chief Supt. Jack Ridgway says "I tell them all the same thing."

"The only guarantee of safety is to give up prostitution."

Dubbing the killer "the Yorkshire ripper" was a natural comparison with the man who terrorized the slums of London almost 100 years ago.

Jack the Ripper, circa 1885, killed prositutes — his total is either six or eight — and disembowled them. He was never caught.

The Yorkshire Ripper has struck 13 times the police are certain of. At least nine of the 11 women who died were prositutes. The other two were in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Olive Smelt, a respectable housewife, was 46 years old four years ago, walking home from visiting friends. It was midnight and she was only about 100 metres from her front door in Halifax.

"The last thing I remember was this man, in his early 30s, coming up to me in the street and saying that the weather was getting better," she says.

"He wasn't very frightening. He was less than six feet tall and he didn't look all that strong.

"He walked on and suddenly I was struck from behind."

Down the street, two young lovers in a car — not realizing the drama they were about to spotlight — turned on their headlights.

The ripper ran, taking his murder weapons with him.

A blunt instrument had been used to fracture Mrs. Smelt's skull. A knife had been used to carve the special ripper trademark — kept secret by police — into her body.

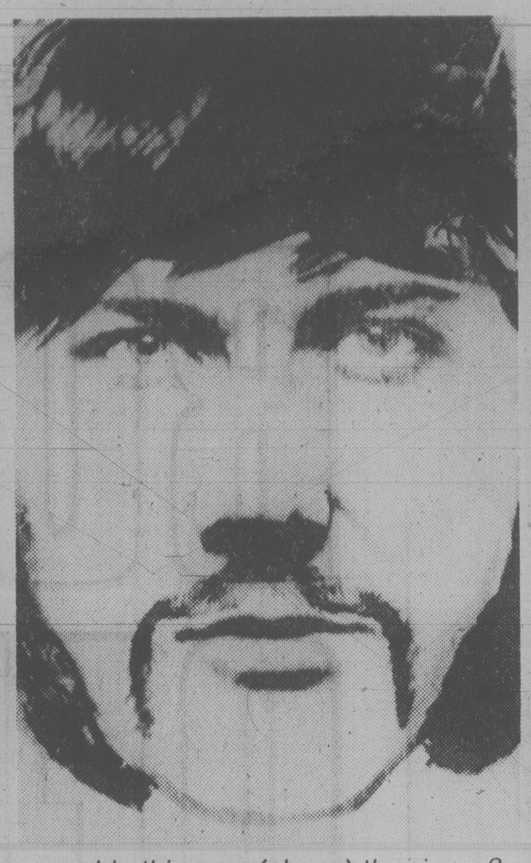

But he hadn't had time to complete the next ritualistic step — the cutting open of the body and the pulling out of the entrails.

Medium Doris Stokes, just returned from helping Los Angeles police on another case, says his first name is "Johnny or Ronnie," that his surname could be "Morris or Morrison," and that he has a scar below his left eye, which twitches.

In the meantime, George Oldfield plays — over and over — a tape that begins:

Perpexed police study boasting tape . . . and is this man (above) the ripper?

Energy vigilantes, stiff fines for U.S.

Canada can't aid fuel-starved U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prospects for the energy-starved U.S. to get some relief from resource-rich Canada are dimming as the latest world energy crunch strains supplies.

Just five years ago, Canada exported more than a million barrels of oil a day to the U.S. and at bargain basement prices compared with current standards.

Now, with domestic production waning and world prices soaring, Canada is gradually ending exports of light crude oil to the U.S. and is turning its attention to development of vast deposits of non-conventional heavy oil and oil sands.

About 55,000 barrels a day of light Alberta crude is exported into the mid-western states under existing contracts along with about 100,000 barrels a day of heavy oil.

Although domestic prices are held below world levels thanks to a generous federal subsidy, an export tax that has climbed steadily since January boosts the border price to world levels.

The export tax set monthly by the National Energy Board, the federal regulatory agency, is $13 a barrel for light crude. The domestic wellhead price, up $1 a barrel July 1 to $13.75, brings the export price to more than $26 a barrel in Canadian dollars or about $23 U.S.

This matches the top price set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries yet still represents a good deal for landlocked mid-western states which face added high transportation costs for Middle East oil.

Although the U.S. is anxious to import more oil from Canada, the immediate outlook is bleak because of the tremendous expense and technological complexity of extracting light crude from the oil sands and heavy oil deposits.

Since conventional production in Alberta, the primary producing province, is forecast to decline by seven per cent between 1980 and 1985, the country's dependence on imported oil has been heightened. Imports now provide about 40 per cent of domestic requirements.

Prospects for increased natural gas supplies are brighter, due mainly to new discoveries in the High Arctic and a recent energy board report saying Canada has enough gas in reserve to export two trillion cubic feet more to the U.S. in the 1980s while starting new flows to eastern Canada.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The U.S. government's war on excessive air conditioning - to be fought with a $7 million enforcement effort and a nationwide "hot line" for turning in violators - will formally take effect next Monday.

After that day, according to an order President Carter signed Tuesday, it will be illegal for owners or managers of most non-residential buildings to set thermostats lower than 78 degrees.

The order, which will be in effect through April 16, 1980, also prohibits heating of non-residential buildings above 65 degrees in the winter. It also limits hot-water temperatures - except where health conditions require higher levels - to a peak of 105 degrees, about 40 degrees lower than the level provided by most domestic water heaters.

All of which could save the nation betwen 200,000 and 400,000 barrels of oil per day, according to the Department of Energy — about two percent of total U.S. consumption, but about ten percent of the amount normally used for heating and cooling.

Congress gave the president standby authority to impose temperature controls in May, and the Energy Department issued final regulations for the effort last week. Carter officially triggered the program Tuesday with a declaration, required by law before the controls can take effect, that the United States is experiencing a "severe energy supply disruption" warranting the restrictions.

John Millhone, the Energy Department official running the new program, said the implementation date was delayed until next Monday to give building owners time to find out about it.

The controls will apply to just about every building, large or small, where people work, play, study, shop, worship, or dine out. Homes and apartment buildings are excluded, as are hospitals, elementary schools, and guest rooms in hotels.

Restaurants and food processing firms will be excluded from the hot water temperature limits because health codes generally require temperatures of at least 160 degrees for dishwashing and other hygenic operations.

Other specific exemptions will be provided for buildings with unusually complex heating and cooling plants. Indoor swimming pools will be exempted from the 65 degree wintertime standard, on the grounds that swimmers might otherwise risk illness.

Violators will theoretically be liable for fines up to $10,000 per day, but Millhone said Tuesday that negotiated settlements will be the preferred enforcement tool.

Millhone emphasized, though, that "we want this program to be taken seriously." To see that it is, the federal government will distribute $7 million to state and local governments, which will bear the brunt of the enforcement burden.

As the Energy Department sees it, the states will probably assign enforcement to building and health inspectors who already make regular inspection tours of most buildings.

In addition, the government will encourage public vigilante efforts by establishing a national hot line that people can call toll-free to tip off enforcers to buildings that are illegally cool or warm.

The hot line number — which will be different from the number set up for reporting violators of gasoline price control rules — will be made public later this week.

The regulations do not require building owners to post a thermometer in a public place so that people can judge compliance. Anyone who wants to help enforce the rules, Millhone said, "can buy a thermometer for about a dollar."

Natural gas switch urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. has proposed to the provincial department of energy, mines and resources that Vancouver-area residents should switch from imported oil to B.C. gas for heating purposes.

The proposal includes a rural gasification program similar to one implemented in Alberta several years ago and a suggestion to again look at supplying natural gas to Vancouver Island.

The immediate step would be to encourage 80,000 residential customers in the lower mainland to use B.C. natural gas rather than fuel oil, most of which comes from imported crude.

The bidding:

Opening lead — king of spades.

Let's assume you're declarer in four hearts and West leads the king of spades. How would you play the hand? Actually, the play is not as simple as it seems.

To begin with, you should duck the king of spades: If you take the king with the ace and East is a first-rate defender, he will signal with the jack to show his J-10 combination. This guarantees him an entry later in spades that will allow him to make the killing club return and put the contract down one.

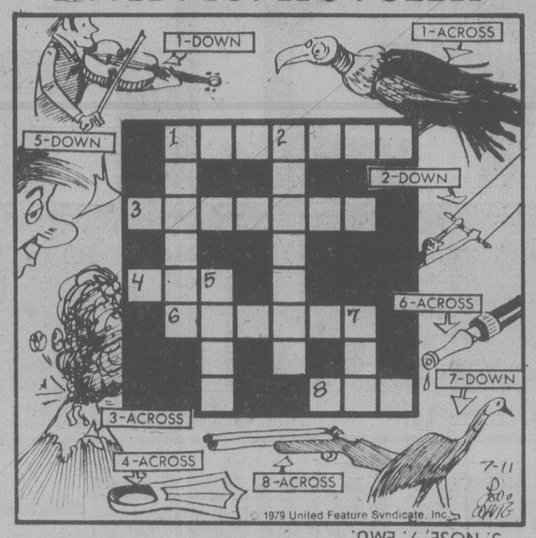

But even if you duck the king of spades, you still have to play carefully later on to make the contract. Let's say that after you duck the king of spades West leads another spade to dummy's ace. In that case, you draw trumps by playing the queen and then the king of hearts.

You next lead a diamond from dummy and, after East follows low, finesse the nine! This extraordinary play insures the contract. West wins the diamond with the queen but is helpless. If he leads a spade, you ruff in dummy and finish with eleven tricks. If West leads the ace of clubs instead, you finish with ten tricks.

East cannot stop you from making the contract by playing his ten on your diamond lead from dummy. You would win with the king, return to dummy with a trump, play another diamond and finesse the nine. This safety play would allow you to finish with eleven tricks.

The governing principle throughout is to shape the play so as to prevent East from ever taking the lead. That is why it is correct to duck the opening spade lead and why you later take the deep diamond finesse. Failure to make either of these plays would cost you the contract, assuming proper defense.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
For Thursday, July 12th
by SIDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar.21-Apr. 19): Light shed on area previously dark. You get backstage view. Your ability to be discreet is tested. Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently. You make valuable, new contact. You are on brink of major discovery, adventure.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Emphasis on contrast between desire and actual requirement. Follow through on hunch — teach and learn. You're being pulled in two directions — simultaneously. What seemed futile backfired — in your favor. Keep the faith!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Surge of activity, popularity could lead to promotion. Another Gemini — and a Sagittarian — could play prominent roles. One in authority is willing to make room for you at more elevated position.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Open lines of communication; stress long-range projects, educational material, publishing prospects. You get facts concerning distance, potential and possible "escape hatch." You get special commitment and your prestige soars.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): Emotions dominate, involvement is a major part of scenario. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Money discussion with one close to you commands spotlight. Reject superficial indications. Delve beneath surface.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Maintain balance, moderate pace. Family, home, remodeling, change of domestic atmosphere featured. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently. Accent on contracts, binding agreements, how you relate to one who is "in your corner."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Refuse to be cajoled into making premature commitment. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Accent on health, dependents, pets and employment. Someone wants something for nothing — from you.

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov. 21): Love, style, creativity are featured. Nothing happens halfway — it now is all or nothing, hot or cold, passionate or tepid — no in-between. Older individual asks you to share responsibility. Respond in affirmative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You finish rather than begin project, transaction, business deal. You gain wider recognition by fulfilling obligation, not by fleeing. Know it, act accordingly. You can establish foothold on territory.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New approach to relatives is essential. Maintain balance, strive for a more independent stance. You get chance to test theories, ideas and to present product of your own creation. You make contact which could be the start of "something big."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on viewing paradoxes, contradictions without becoming discouraged. Another Aquarian, a Cancer and Capricorn could figure in scenario. Income potential is brighter than originally anticipated.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): You'll have reason to rejoice. Cycle remains high; you will be at right place at crucial moment. One who seemed indifferent shows another side. Follow through, make your own luck. You are going places!

IF JULY 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you have a "pleasing" personality and a robust appetite. You have a fine sense of humor and you are attractive to opposite sex. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play key roles in your life. August could be your most significant month of 1979, a year which coincides with wider recognition, finding satisfaction, love and getting finger on pulse of public. You travel in December — joy will replace a burden. This month, July, you learn what is of value, what can be discarded, what is real as contrasted to wishful thinking. You are prescient, artistic, capable of illustrating beliefs in attractive, compelling manner.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 5688 for the game today. Two 8's, one 6 and one 5. Using all four each time but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also roots and powers. For example, a solution for 71 could be 68 + 8 - 5.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 102. I shall be glad to check solutions.

Answer Tomorrow

Yesterday's answer: BOMB was 1261.

Immigration flood looms

HONG KONG (UPI) — Hong Kong will be overwhelmed by a flood of 200,000 Chinese immigrants by year's end if they continue to cross into the British colony at the present rate, officials said.

A government spokesman said newly compiled figures showed 40,706 legal immigrants arrived from China in the first four months of the year and another 19,217 Chinese trying to enter the colony illegally were caught and returned.

Immigration officials believe that for every illegal immigrant they catch at least two others evade the increasingly tight border controls and blend in with the colony's nearly 5 million Chinese residents.

At that rate of entry, the spokesman said, Hong Kong will have to absorb about 237,000 Chinese from the mainland in 1979, overwhelming the better-publicized plight of the Vietnamese boat people. About 21,000 Vietnamese are housed in Hong Kong refugee camps.

If Hong Kong's fears materialize, the influx of Chinese this year will nearly equal the total of 250,000 who have entered in the past five years. Most of the emmigrants once lived in Kwangtung Province, just across the border.

Chinese authorities are believed to be allowing the increased emigration from the mainland to comply with an American law, the Jackson-Vanik amendment, governing the granting of most favored nation trading status.

One key condition of the amendment is that government must not limit the emigration of their citizens. The law has been used to censure the Soviet Union for its restrictive immigration policy.

Hong Kong Governor, Sir Murray MacLehose, discussed the sensitive immigrant issue with Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping) and other top officials during his unprecedented 10-day tour in April.

Peking promised MacLehose it would soon take steps to reduce the flow.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Getting the most from fig

GARDENING
Hilda Beastall

Each summer while a few figs are swelling on our two small trees I get enthusiastic about moving them to a "better 'ole" where they will have the chance to produce a really good crop.

Figs are so delicious when ripened on the tree and eaten at once that they should be grown by all gardeners who value the nutrition of fresh garden produce.

Figs can be grown in tubs on apartment balconies, on sundecks and in tubs on tiny patio gardens.

Or they may be set down into a concrete bordered hole in the patio with a sunny wall or fence behind to help ripen the fruits before frost in September.

Root restriction for early fig production is a necessity. Locally we see fig trees thriving in rocky pockets of soil against sunny house walls, or in a narrow border near a gravel or blacktop driveway against a wood or stucco garage.

In an exceptionally sheltered warm garden, an open situation can be found. This is the ideal so long as root restriction can be given. This is sometimes made possible by a clay soil.

Varieties suitable for growing here are Brunswick and Brown Turkey, neither requiring pollination, or caprification as it is known when referring to figs. Both are parthenocarpic, capable of bearing fruit without being pollinated from the outside of what we call the "fruit".

Enquire at local nurseries specializing in fruit tree growing; one or the other is usually available if ordered in advance.

This year there were tiny fruits showing earlier than usual, though tips of some exposed branches showed a touch of winter kill. These were removed as leaves started, and then fruits developed rapidly.

In June the new branches were shortened; some were cut off at the source to prevent crossing of branches and creating too much shade. In hot climates the large leaves are needed to prevent scalding of the fruits.

Also, we get better friut size and earlier ripening by nipping out the tip growing bud of each twig bearing fruit, after three or four leaves have expanded beyond the fruit or cluster of fruits.

Those expanding leaves beyond the fruits are a form of insurance, that food supplies will pass through the twig to nourish them, and on the way the fruits will take what they need for developing the seeds within them — for that is nature's way, even thought I understand these varieties do not set viable seeds. If the tip remains, most of the food will go directly to the tip with only a minimal amount for the fruits.

Another aid at this time is deep watering about every 10 days, again for swelling the figs. At the same time, early July, it is beneficial to apply a deep mulch of rotted compost or very old manure to the root area. The soil will be well warmed by this time and the loose top mulch retains warmth and holds moisture.

This care usually starts the growth of a second crop of figs which show as pinhead swellings at the axils of leaves. In this climate, these tiny July fruits must be removed when the trees are grown outdoors, for there is no chance of their ripening. Neither will they develop next year after going through the winter. Rub them out with the fingers as soon as seen. Check daily for a week or so to be sure of getting all removed. Neglecting this small attention is thought to delay the spring development of fruit buds.

Exposure of the fig fruits to warmth hastens ripening, which takes place any time from late August into September, two or three figs each day according to size of tree.

Brunswick is lighter in color than Brown Turkey, even at maturity, and is said to develop better flavor if allowed to ripen two or three days at room temperature after picking.

Brown Turkey is picked fully ripe for eating at once — the ultimate in a sweet fruit, sun-warmed and delicious.

If you have the spot, in a ground-level garden or on a deck or balcony, a fig tree will give much pleasure. Keep it under control as regards size and enjoy the results.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

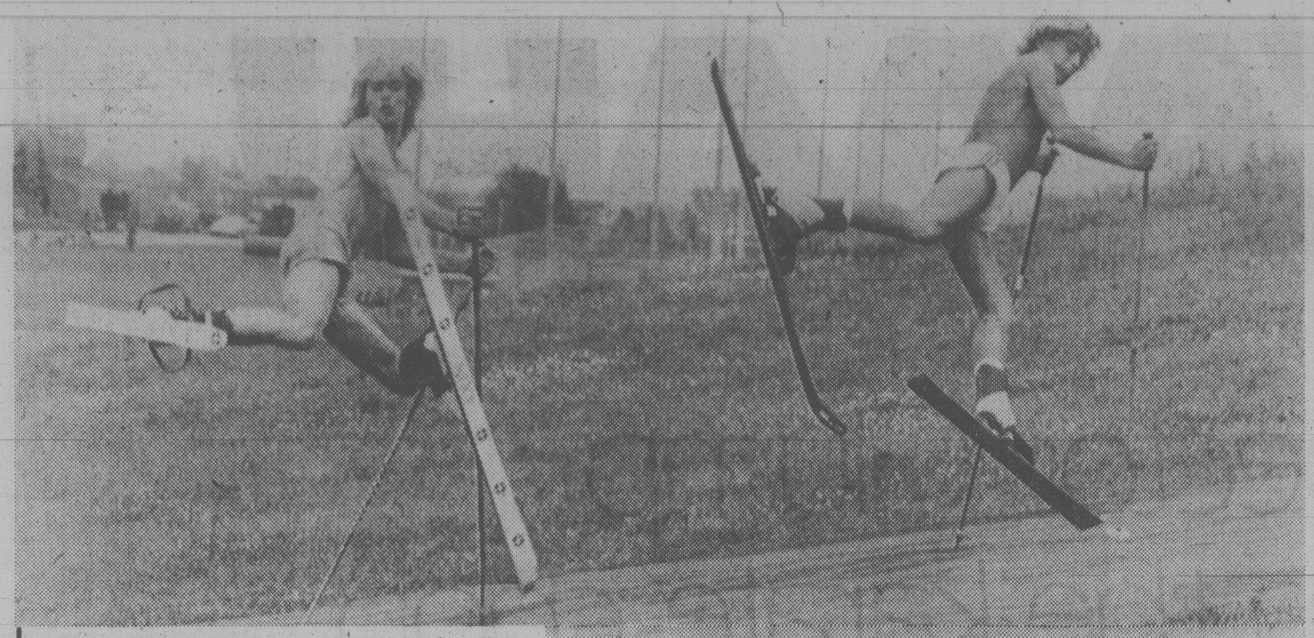

Search for plane

CHILLIWACK (CP) — An air search was continuing today n the Interior for a light plane, with two persons aboard, missing on a flight to Williams Lake from Chilliwack.

Search and rescue officials said the single-engine Cessna 172 left this Fraser Valley community early Tuesday on the flight to Williams Lake, but had not been heard from. Names of the two aboard were not released.

Officials said the plane is equipped with an electronic locater transmitter.

A Buffalo aircraft from Canadian Forces Base Comox and a Twin Otter from the 4th Air Reserve wing in Edmonton were conducting an electronic search Tuesday.

WHO NEEDS SNOW to go skiing? Dry-land skiers are on the increase as enthusiasts find ways to stretch the season through the summer. Above, Felix Veski and Art Bronkhorst perform what is known as a thumper manoeuvre in a Toronto park, while at right Beverly Culham and Debbie Corrigan show the right and wrong way to ski downhill on grass. They say the tank-track-like contraptions strapped to their ski boots improve their winter form and keep them in shape, but require a different technique to skiing on snow.

Uranus goal by 1986 for Voyager

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

PASADENA, Calif. — Moving by Jupiter at 44,000 miles an hour, the Voyager 2 spacecraft Tuesday was put on a path that will take it to the distant planet Uranus in 1986.

As things stood Tuesday, the 1,800 pound Voyager 2 will arrive at Saturn in August of 1981 after a trip of almost 500 million miles from Jupiter. On leaving Saturn, the silver-and-black spacecraft will set sail to an unchartered region of space toward Uranus more than one billion miles beyond.

Already one hundred million miles ahead of it, Voyager 1 was still on course Tuesday for an encounter with Saturn, its dazzling rings and its mysterious moon Titan in November of 1980. If everything goes well in the next 18 months and Voyager 1 reaches Saturn unscathed, Voyager 2 will be kept on the course it was placed in Tuesday and targeted for Uranus.

Should Voyager 1 run into trouble or fail to fly close to Titan or behind the rings of Saturn, Voyager 2's course will be changed to bring it closer to Titan and behind Saturn's rings.

If that happens, Voyager 2 will never reach Uranus.

"Our main concern is still Saturn, its rings and Titan," Voyager mission analyst Charles Kohlhase said Tuesday at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory where the probe is directed. "We will only target Voyager 2 to Uranus if Voyager 1 makes a successful flight to Saturn."

The manoeuvre that put Voyager 2 on course for Uranus was a 76-minute slow burn of its small thruster engines. With the spacecraft's nose pointed back toward earth, this burn slowed it slightly so that if it stays on course it will sail by Saturn in August of 1981 on a path that will bring it to Uranus in January, 1986.

This was the first time any spacecraft has ever been targeted to Uranus, the third from the edge of the solar system. Among the planets only Neptune and Pluto are farther from the sun than Uranus, which is seprated from earth by two billion miles of space.

Voyager 2's new course is possible because the craft used so little fuel in its two-year journey from earth to Jupiter that it had more than enough to allow flight controllers the margins they would need to still make a choice next year between Saturn and Uranus.

"With the fuel margins we have now, we have a 95 per cent chance of getting to Uranus," mission analyst Kohlhase said. "By this I mean we have enough to navigate there, maintain adequate control when we get there and target and move the cameras around so we can photograph all targets of interest."

If Voyager 2 goes to Uranus, it will fly by the Saturn's moon Titan at a distance of about 500,000 miles instead of the 5,000 miles it would have if it were not flying to Uranus. Presumably, Voyager 1 will get so close to Titan — the only moon in the solar system with an atmosphere as thick as the earth's — that scientists will be satisfied.

Major quake rocks China

TOKYO (AP) — An earthquake measuring six on the Richter scale and more than 40 aftershocks hit Jiangsu (Kiangsu) province in east China, killing 11 persons, injuring several dozen in one commune and causing casualties in two others, Xinhua (Hsinhua) reported today.

The official Chinese news agency said most of the houses in one commune were destroyed by the quake, which struck Monday, about 70 per cent of the structures in a second commune were ruined, and some reservoirs were cracked.

"Up to this morning, more than 40 shocks at under magnitude four had occurred since the first quake," Xinhua said. It said that relief teams have been sent to the stricken area to aid victims.

The agency said the earthquake "spread to a considerably wide area" and that shocks were felt in the cities of Shanghai, Zhenjiang (Chenchiang), Nanjing (Nanking), Wuxi (Wuhsi), Changzhou (Changchow), Suzhou (Suchow), Lianyungang (Lienyunkang) and some counties in Zhejiang (Chekiang), Anhui (Anhwei) and Hubei (Hupeh) provinces.

The quake struck at 6:57 p.m. Monday and was centred in Liyang County in southwestern Jiangsu province, Xinhua said.

In addition to listing 11 persons killed in one commune and several dozen injured in another, it said "there also were casualties in two other communes."

It said that "some reservoirs in the quake-afflicted area show cracks."

Buried alive, but survives

BEAVERLODGE, Alta. (CP) — Perry Pierson, 20, of Berwyn, Alta., was purple and near death when he was dug out of 1.8 metres of dirt he'd been buried under for 30 minutes.

But Pierson, trapped at the bottom of a manhole, survived his ordeal Tuesday after a backhoe operator dug him out.

Police said Pierson was working at the bottom of a 4.8-metre-deep manhole when a heavy equipment operator accidently dumped a load of dirt into the hole.

A backhoe operator immediately began digging up the concrete around the manhole to get to Pierson.

Ambulance operators used a portable oxygen unit to revive Pierson, who suffered a few minor cuts in the mishap.

Alberta, B.C. fastest growing

OTTAWA (UPC) — Alberta continues to have the fastest population growth in Canada while the growth rate has slowed in five other provinces, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

The agency said booming Alberta was growing at a rate of 28 persons per thousand as of April 1. British Columbia was the second fastest growing province with a growth rate of 15 per thousand, while Newfoundland and NOVA Scotia followed with rates of nine per thousand and eight per thousand respectively.

A total of five provinces recorded a declining rate of population growth, including Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Ontario, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba. Quebec's rate of growth stayed virtually the same.

The agency said Canada's growth rate slowed because of a decrease in international immigration into the country. In fact, only 7 percent of the April 1 population increase was attributed to immigration.

Statistics Canada said the nation's population on April 1 stood at 23,644,800 — an increase of more than 200,000 at the same time last year.

Painter dies

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Nikolai Zinoviev, a specialist in folk art and restoration and a celebrated painter of miniatures in the ancient Russian style, has died in Moscow at the age of 91.

Estes guilty of fraud

DALLAS (UPI) — Billie Sol Estes, farmbelt flimflam man whose legendary fertilizer swindle made his name synonymous with easy money in the 1960s, today was found guilty of fraud and tax evasion charges.

The federal jury had deliberated since Thursday in reaching a verdict in the complicated case involving 22 charges contained in a 31-page indictment.

The jury reported about noon that all 12 members had agreed Estes was guilty on at least one count of fraud and that the former swindler and a business associate, Raymond Horton of Abilene, Texas, were also guilty of attempting to hide their assets from the Internal Revenue Service.

But the jury, with many members showing the strain of long hours of deliberation, told Federal Judge Robert Hill they were unable to reach a decision on the heart of the prosecution case — whether Estes and Horton had bilked three leasing companies out of $600,000 through leases on non-existent steam cleaners.

Judge Hill immediately ordered the jury to resume deliberations.

In 1978, Estes pleaded guilty to lesser fraud charges as part of a plea bargaining agreement.

Major cuts for import duties

OTTAWA (CP) — Industries, farmers and fishermen will face tougher competition from abroad as a result of major reductions in import protective duties announced today.

In return, exporters should find it easier to sell their products in foreign countries because of reduced tariffs agreed to in international talks concluded in Geneva.

The net result, federal trade officials say, should be lower prices for consumers and increased efficiency by producers.

Trade officials say the agreement, released in capitals around the world today, calls for cuts in Canadian import duties averaging 40 per cent, to be introduced over eight years beginning Jan. 1, 1980.

Canada's major trading partners — the United States, Japan and the nine-member European Economic Community (EEC) — will cut their tariffs on Canadian goods by about the same amount.

The cuts are part of the new General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) started in 1973 in an attempt to lower some of the barriers that inhibit world trade.

Mutual tariff cuts agreed to by Canada and its trading partners affect nearly every sector of the economy, although officials say that Canada was more successful in some areas than others in the negotiations.

Officials say major gains were made in obtaining reduction or elimination of tariffs in such items as forest products, machinery, chemicals and plastics, agriculture machinery, transportation equipment and aircraft, furniture, fish, agricultural products and non-ferrous metals.

A major exception was textiles and clothing which will continue to receive the high level of protection the industry now receives in Canada and most developed countries.

Officials say this country made major gains in obtaining reduced tariffs on agricultural products sold to Japan and the United States and more limited gains on farm products sold to the EEC.

The fishing industry, which has been growing quickly since the imposition of the 200-mile limit, is expected to get a further boost from significant tariff cuts on exports to the U.S. and Japan. The EEC has agreed to tariff cuts and quota increases on 12 items.

The booming forest industry, which has seen exports surge in the last two years because of the lower value of the Canadian dollar, will get further help from major tariff cuts in the U.S., Japan and the EEC.

The cuts in U.S. tariffs on more highly-finished wood products "should encourage further resource upgrading in Canada prior to export," the trade department said.

Officials said Canada made only limited gains in its goal of getting bigger tariff reductions on more highly-processed mineral products.

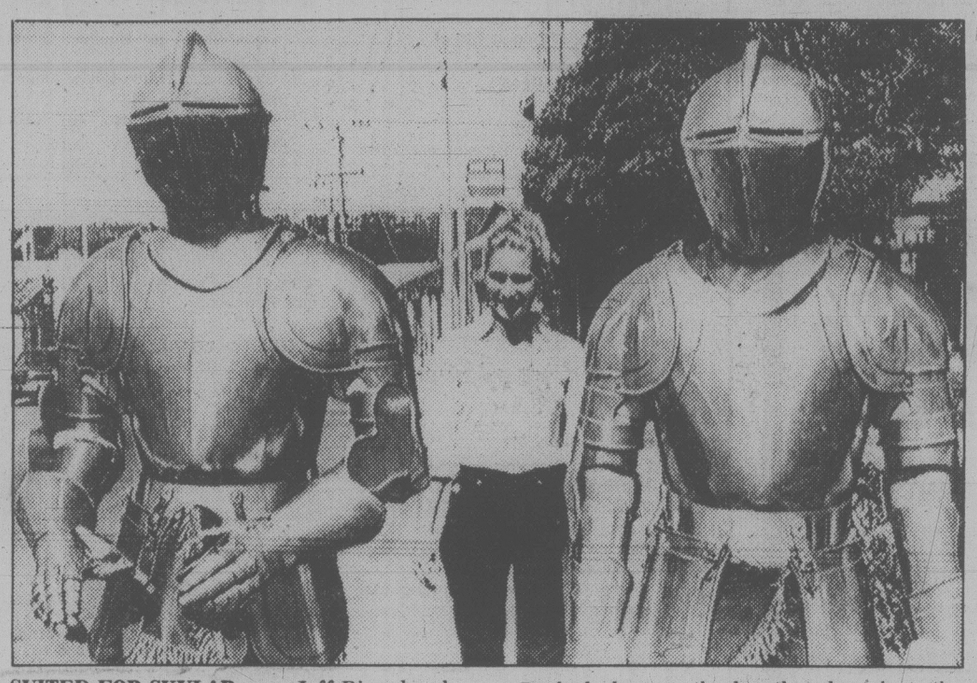

At present, tariffs tend to be low or non-existent on raw materials but face higher tariffs as they are further processed.

"It was not possible to achieve fully the Canadian objective of eliminating or substantially reducing U.S., EEC and Japanese tariffs over the whole range of non-ferrous metals and semi-fabricated products," the department said.

But there were some gains in the area of semi-processed products.

The U.S. and Canada, for example, each will eliminate a tariff of one cent a pound on aluminum ingots. U.S. tariffs are also to be reduced on insulated and non-insulated wire and cable.

There were few gains in negotiating barriers to sale of iron and steel in the U.S., where import quotas now are in effect.

SUITED FOR SKYLAB were Jeff Risond and Ralph Brumheller of Monterey, Calif. Debbie Reyko looks on as the dauntless duo take to the street ready for anything.

Skylab Day in Victoria . . . just a crashing bore!

Skylab's re-entry proved a crashing bore to Victorians today.

As the projected time for splashdown (although a lot of youngsters claimed to be hoping for a crash-down in their backyards) passed this morning, Victorians interviewed by The Times expressed massive indifference to what proved to be a local non-event.

"I heard it was landing elsewhere so I'm not too worried," said B.C. Hydro Transit supervisor Ron Paterson as he stood under the protective marquee of National Trust on Douglas Street. "But my kids are worried."

Paterson said that when the possibility of Skylab landing on Victoria had come up, his seven-year-old daughter, Sharlene, commented she hadn't lived very long.

"Kind of a strange thing for a kid to say," Paterson remarked, adding that his son had also expressed some concern.

A grandmother who wouldn't give her name suggested a similar thing about her grandchildren, aged 9 and 12.

"The kids seem to be upset," she claimed.

But youngsters in downtown Victoria today didn't seem too interested in the possibility of 80 tons of space debris raining from the skies.

"I'd be damned flattered if it did hit me," was the reaction of Margaret Hardy of Simcoe Street. "Think of the odds against it. I'd be unique."

When asked what he was doing under the Woolworth marquee, Jerome Parnell, 24, from Masset in the Queen Charlotte Islands, said: "They told me it was going to rain."

What about Skylab? Parnell was fatalistic.

"If it's going to hit us, there's not much we can do about it. If it's coming down, we can't change that."

Betty Kirchner, 23, of Shelbourne Street, believes the contention of one radio commentator that the whole brouhaha about Skylab was contrived by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to focus public attention on the cutbacks to its budget.

She also believes they had the technological know-how to bring Skylab down anywhere they choose.

Valerie Hay, of 885 Craigflower, a pert 13-year-old who was born in Ontario and moved here seven years ago, has to be disappointed.

She predicted this morning that Skylab would come down somewhere in eastern Canada.

About a half-hour later, it splashed down in the Indian Ocean. So much for Valerie's career as a prophet.

Molten debris falls into sea

Times News Services

Skylab, a ghost ship with a proud tradition, plummeted back to earth like a flaming meteor today. Trackers said tons of molten debris fell into the Indian Ocean southwest of Australia.

No one reported any pieces falling on land.

About 20 tons of fiery metal were scattered over 5,920 kilometres of the Indian Ocean, the North American Air Defence Command reported.

NORAD said the largest pieces of Skylab apparently hit at the front of the 160-kilometre wide corridor about 320 kilometres from the southwestern Australia city of Perth.

It was nighttime there, which made the flaming pieces clearly visible in the atmosphere.

NASA officials said the final plunge was at 42 degrees 87 south latitude and 105 degrees 97 east longtitude — a point off the southwestern corner of Australia.

Skylab ended six years and 874 million miles of flight around Earth with a tumbling, wobbling, rolling dive into the upper fringes of the atmosphere at 10,250 km/h beginning to disintegrate at 9.10 a.m. Victoria-time.

As the world waited for the final break-up, airports were closed and flights delayed including several in Vancouver.

Check-out clerks get $9.08

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unionized supermarket clerks on Vancouver Island and in Greater Vancouver voted 95 per cent to accept a new contract that gives them hourly increases of 90 cents in each year of the two-year pact.

The agreement, retroactive to April 1, raises the hourly wage for a full-time clerk-cashier with 12 months experience to $9.08 effective Monday. Part-time employees get $9.73.

General clerks will earn $9.78 an hour full-time and $10.48 as a part-time employee. Produce managers, who get the top rate, will make $12.08 an hour at the end of the contract.

The 3,500 employees, members of the Retail Clerks International Union, are the first of a total of 9,300 supermarket workers to vote

Protesting police return

BATHURST,N.B. (CP) — For the second time in 12 hours striking city policemen decided today to end their seven-day-old strike and return to work.

Talks between city and its striking police and outside workers broke off about noon today and the outstanding issue was turned over to the provincial government for settlement.

Blair Boucher, chief negotiator for the police, said it was decided the rank structure issue which was holding up agreement would be submitted to binding arbitration.

Immediate efforts began advise policemen and get them back to work by late afternoon.

"The men want to go back to work," Boucher said. "We will do everything we can to bring the situation of the last few days back to normal."

In the last few nights, vandals have run wild in the city's downtown area.

"With the help of the public we will do all we can to bring those people who have violated the law before the courts."

The mediator waited this morning while city council debated the explosive strike behind closed doors for 90 minutes. Then he called for a meeting with union leaders after council said it will not budge on a controversial rank structure clause.

Hewitt incensed by Hydro move to block sale

B.C. Hydro's bid to block a major provincial gas sale to the U.S. without informing the cabinet has incensed Energy Minister Jim Hewitt.

The same day Hewitt issued a glowing press release giving details of the major natural gas sale he learned of Hydro's surprise appeal to the National Energy Board in Ottawa not to let the deal proceed.

In his press release, Hewitt said he expected no trouble getting NEB approval for the sale of up to 110,000 million cubic feet per day of gas to the El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Hewitt, who sits on the Hydro board of directors and is the cabinet minister responsible for the public utility, said he will meet with chairman Bob Bonner and other officials to discuss their action.

Hewitt said if Hydro officials have objections to the gas sale, then they should have discussed them with him. Instead he found out about their move after they appeared before the NEB.

Bonner's action was lauded by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) who said Hydro's decision to seek a delay is correct.

"We should not be asking the NEB to authorize additional exports of natural gas from B.C. because it is a fuel that we are going to dearly need in the future," Macdonald said.

Macdonald, who at one time was the cabinet minister responsible for the province's energy policies said the government is exchanging some quick money at the expense of future generations.

He said the gas should be sold for at least $3 a thousand cubic feet and not the $2.16 U.S. a thousand cubic feet.

Canada faces gas shortage

Times News Services

TORONTO — Ontario and Quebec could be facing spot gasoline shortages, especially in super unleaded gasoline, if Canadians continue using much more gasoline than oil companies or federal energy planners have predicted, according to the Globe and Mail.

If these spot shortages begin, it may lead to dangerously tight supplies of heating oil in Eastern Canada late this winter.

And Alberta refineries are running at maximum production levels in an attempt to keep up with demand.

Figures from the National Energy Board show that the growth of demand for gasoline in April rose 6.2 per cent across Canada, the newspaper says.

It says board figures, which so far have not been made public, indicate that Eastern Canada's demand for gasoline rose seven per cent in April.

The newspaper quotes the board as saying growth was 4.2 per cent in May — more than double the two per cent expected by most experts.

Edmonton area refineries are also trying to build up fuel oil inventories in Quebec and the Atlantic provinces.

Oil company spokesman said the increased requirement for refined products, which normally peaks in July, is related to demands within Canada and not to any additional exports to the gasoline and diesel-hungry United States.

Alberta oil fields, meanwhile, have been called upon to produce 22 per cent more oil than they did in July, 1978. Production rates authorized by Alberta's energy resources conservation board call for flow rates equalling those of peak demand levels last winter.

Buckle-up $350 fine

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A man who refused to sit down and buckle up as an Air Canada flight landed in Toronto last March has been fined $350 in provincial court.

William Sims, 48, was charged under Air Navigational Orders with failing to keep his seat during the landing of an aircraft.

U.S. dollar at banks this morning bought $1.1540 Canadian, according to the Greater Victoria Information Centre.

New setback for woods pact

Negotiators for the Canadian Paperworkers Union withdrew conditional acceptance Tuesday of a two-year contract proposed by the forest industry.

Art Gruntman, vice-president of the 7,500-member union, said the bargaining committee decided not to recommend the offer due to inability to agree on an issue involving 230 striking pulp workers from two locals in Mackenzie.

Gruntman said a tentative agreement will go to the rank and file for a ratification vote without recommendation. Vote results are expected next week.

Workers at B.C. Forest Products Ltd. and Finlay Forest Products Ltd. in Mackenzie want an additional northern isolation allowance in return for the extra week of vacation the companies originally gave them to go to the mills and then took away in 1977, Gruntman said.

Dick Lester, president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, said an isolation allowance cannot be given "without affecting the whole industry."

He said the union was told three times during negotiations the allowance would not be negotiated as a local issue.

Earlier, 750 pulp workers at Eurocan Pulp and Paper in Kitimat voted 70 per cent to end their strike after the two sides agreed on a union demand for changes in shift scheduling.

Despite this, the number of striking workers in the B.C. forest industry increased to 9,000.

Picket lines set up by Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada at the MacMillan Bloedel plant at Harmac near Nanaimo spread to mills at Crofton, Prince Rupert, Powell River and Prince George. The closures affected 5,000 workers, some of them Canadian Paperworkers members who honored picket lines.

Another 4,000 workers, mostly from the International Woodworkers of America, remain off the job in the Alberni Valley on Vancouver Island.

Earl Foxcroft, president of the woodworkers local in Port Alberni, said he was advising the workers to return to work so they might vote on the proposed pact.

Negotiators for the woodworkers have recommended that the 28,000 coastal members accept the contract. Bargaining resumes today for 7,500 southern Interior IWA members.

The Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers union has recommended its 6,000 members reject the pact, which calls for a pay increase of 90 cents an hour in the first year and 9.5 per cent in the second year. The base rate in the forest industry when contracts expired last month was $8.16 an hour.

B.C. taken to cleaners over Columbia: NDP

The massive final price-tag for Columbia River Hydro projects proves conclusively that U.S. negotiators took B.C. to the cleaners financially, an NDP MLA said Tuesday.

Chris D'Arcy (Rossland-Trail) noted that the cost of building the river system's three dams alone exceeded the U.S. contribution. When the cost of the generating and transmission system at the Mica dam is added the shortfall is even greater.

B.C. received $480 million from the U.S. to cover the costs although the total for the High Arrow, Duncan and Mica dams eventually topped $600 million — a shortfall of some $120 million.

The cost of generators and transmission facilities at Mica added an extra $675 million to the final price-tag.

Duncan and Arrow projects are storage dams only.

The U.S. hydro systems have first priority on storage water so B.C. lost the ability to control its own rivers, a very serious error if there is ever a serious drought, D'Arcy said.

The final costs were tabled in the legislature Monday by Energy Minister and B.C. Hydro director Jim Hewitt in response to questions from D'Arcy.

Illegal roadblock now legal

A Penticton gun club which illegally tried to keep people away from surrounding property now has a government-issued permit guaranteeing it total privacy, the NDP charged Tuesday.

Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) noted the club was so adamant about preventing people from using an adjacent public access road that at one time a local youth was shot and seriously wounded by an over-zealous caretaker at the club.

Yet while a civil suit arising from the incident was still in progress, the lands branch of the provincial government approved a lease change application giving the Penticton Fish, Game and Rifle Club exclusive use of the public right-of-way.

Pointing out that Energy Minister Jim Hewitt's constituency secretary is a member of the board of directors of the club, Macdonald wanted to know why the government took the side of the club in extending the leasehold.

Lands Minister Jim Chabot said he would take the question as notice.

The gun club tried to keep people off the public road which led up to a popular hiking and motorcycle trail by posting notices and building a dirt barrier on the road.

At one time the lands branch warned the club to remove the signs and obstacles. Two years ago four young Penticton motorcyclists were using the access road to get to the old wagon trail when, from about 15 feet away, the caretaker shot one of the youths.

The caretaker was eventually convicted of criminal negligence in the use of a firearm.

But while a civil suit was in progress, the club was given the right to block the road via the amended lease.

A hole to call home

PARKSVILLE (UPC) — A visit to Frank Wissemann's home means one does not get to see the stars unless one happens by the south side of the dwelling.

Wissemann's home is not your traditional house. It is buried on three sides under tons of soil to use the earth's natural warmth for heating.

Wissemann, who designed and is building the six-room home, says it will protect its occupants against nuclear fallout and will be standing 2,000 years from now. He claims it is the first of its kind.

The most attractive feature of the home, however, is its $30,000 price tag which, Wissemann claims, is some $10,000 less than a conventional six-room dwelling would cost in the Qualicum-Parksville area of Vancouver Island, about 150 miles north of Victoria.

The floors, walls and roof of the house are all constructed of reinforced concrete so they can support the tons of earth which bury them.

A greenhouse will be built along the length of the south wall to provide solar heating as well as for growing vegetables and tropical plants.

Wissemann, a mechanical contractor who has been building homes in Qualicum-Parksville for 10 years, calls his new home, scheduled to be completed in June, "an earth-sheltered solar house." He said he got the idea from reading press and magazine reports on homes using solar energy for heating.

"Heat is always in the earth, and by using earth against the walls and on the roof to the depth of three feet, it will insulate the house," he said.

"The year-round inside temperature will remain between 55 and 60 degress, even if no heating is provided," Wissemann said, adding that extra heat can be provided by passive solar heating from the greenhouse.

Wissemann said the adjoining wall between the house and the greenhouse will have two sliding glass doors, allowing heat from the greenhouse to pass easily into the home.

"In the winter, when the sun is lower in the sky, it will be able to shine right through the greenhouse and the sliding doors and strike an eight-inch thick reinforced concrete wall at the back of the living room," he said.

He said the wall will thus be heated and when the sun goes down, will give off heat slowly, keeping up the temperature of the house. The roof will overhang the south wall to prevent the high summer sun striking the sliding glass doors and causing excessive heat.

"The large expanse of glass on the greenhouse, which will be 12 feet wide by 12 feet high and 36 inches long, will allow a lot of heat to escape at night," Wissemann added.

He said to prevent this he will build shutters which will be closed automatically at the command of photo-electric cells.

He said grass will be sown over the soil to prevent erosion and for appearance's sake.

"I hope to have a sundeck on top, but the whole idea of the house is designed so as not to waste space. We will have two bedrooms," but there will be no hallways. The house will have normal amenities.

One of the possible drawbacks is the fact both bedrooms will be without windows. The only windows in the house will be on the south side.

International conspiracy, says Ross' lawyer

Defence counsel in the Tommy Ross Jr. B.C. Supreme Court murder trial in Victoria told the jury Tuesday evidence against the accused points to an international police conspiracy.

Douglas Christie, summing up the case for the accused, was referring specifically to a thumb print, identified by police as Ross', which was found June 10 last year in the Queens Avenue apartment of 26-year-old Janice Forbes, who was found strangled May 14, 1978.

Ross, 20, of Los Angeles, is being tried on a charge of first-degree murder in Forbes' death.

Christie took about 2½ hours to present his case. When he finished Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane began his charge to the jury during which he will canvass various points of law and summarize the case for and against the accused.

The jury is expected to begin deciding on a verdict today.

Christie referred to the fact the thumb print was not found on the handle of a teapot in Forbes' bedroom until nearly a month after she was found murdered.

He said it would have been logical for Sgt. Patrick Braiden, chief of the identification section of Victoria police, to check the print for forgery because there was such a gap between the day he first checked the apartment for prints, May 14, and June 10 when the print was found.

That was not done, he said.

Also, Christie said it seems strange that Braiden didn't see the teapot and check it for prints on May 14 because he testified that on May 14 he picked up a belt which was lying very close to where the teapot was found June 10.

Christie said he was not inferring that Braiden was dishonest.

"But there is something wrong when he doesn't see what they (the police) say was there June 10."

Christie said the Crown's case against Ross depends on the fingerprint and the fingerprint then became the basis for similar fact evidence being introduced from a Port Angeles slaying.

The jury heard evidence that Ross' fingerprint was found in the apartment of Janet Bowcott, 20, on April 24, 1978, the day she was found strangled with her hands bound behind her back and her ankles tied together.

Christie said once evidence in the Port Angeles case was admitted, the trial became an international case with some serious discrepancies.

He said there is something definitely wrong in the Crown's case and he added he would label it an international conspiracy.

"I wouldn't suggest these things lightly but if you look at the evidence," Christie said, there is no other conclusion to be drawn.

Christie also alluded to a visit by Victoria police to Bellingham in late May last year or early June to get prints of Ross and other items of identification.

Yet, he said, Ross' prints were already available to Braiden.

The inference then is that the reason the police went to Bellingham was to get original prints that could be transferred and used in the Forbes' case, Christie said.

"There's something definitely wrong."

He said the Crown's case swings on "suspect circumstantial evidence and fingerprints. Without the fingerprints there would be nothing."

Christie said the evidence from the Port Angeles case "if it had stood alone, would not have properly hung a dog but it is introduced here to hang a man on another matter.

"It is absolutely incredible what has happened in this case."

He dismissed the Port Angeles evidence as "an incredible array of basically insignificant facts."

Christie told the jury that Ross is presumed innocent until the Crown proves his guilt beyond any reasonable doubt.

Before the judge

The 32-year-old victim in a June 18 police shooting in Central Saanich appeared in provincial court Tuesday.

John James Pilatzke, 5433 Densmore, was formally charged with breaking and entering Fay's Brentwood Dry Cleaners, 7183 West Saanich, and possession of a weapon, a file.

Pilatzke was jointly charged with 23-year-old Robert Woolcock, 3459 Plymouth, and 24-year-old Lori Ami Still, of 2549 Dowler and 3134 Alder, in connection with the break-in.

Constable Neil Laing fired three shots during the investigation of a break-in at the dry cleaning premises.

Woolcock and Still appeared in court June 19 but Pilatzke was unable to appear until Tuesday because he was in hospital.

Judge Fred Green remanded Pilatzke until today when the co-accused return to court for possible election of trial method.

A Nanaimo driver who sent five persons to hospital with minor injuries was given a seven-day jail term and fined $175.

Steven James Roberts, 250 Victoria, pleaded guilty to driving while under suspension and driving without due care and attention.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Roberts drove through a red light at Johnson and Fernwood about 8 p.m. June 25. A car proceeding through a green light on Fernwood was struck and five persons were injured.

Laughton said Roberts jumped out of his car and ran away but his sister, a passenger in his vehicle, stayed at the scene.

Roberts was convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 in March at Ladysmith and was suspended from driving on March 15, the suspension to last until Sept. 15.

Roberts said he was taking penicillin and pills at the time and was not familiar with Victoria streets.

Green handed out the jail term for the driving while suspended and the fine for careless driving.

A two-day jail term was handed a 26-year-old man who appeared to be intoxicated when he first appeared before Green in the morning.

Robert Stanley Taylor, 1008 Hillside, pleaded guilty to wilful damage and was remanded in custody until the afternoon to see if his condition would improve.

Laughton said Taylor left the Colony Inn beer parlor in the late afternoon of June 26 and was walking up Hillside when he tore off a vent window from a car parked in front of 766 Hillside. Taylor climbed into the car but got out when questioned by the owner.

Taylor told the judge he "just wanted to sit down and rest."

"I was loaded," he said.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Robert John MacKay, 22, of 948 Esquimalt, $400; Andrew Richard Calder, 19, of 829 Admirals, $300; Frederick Walter Smith, 58, of 617 Admirals, $250; and Lawrence Andrew Garraway, 20, of 6995 Anglers Lane, Brentwood, $100.

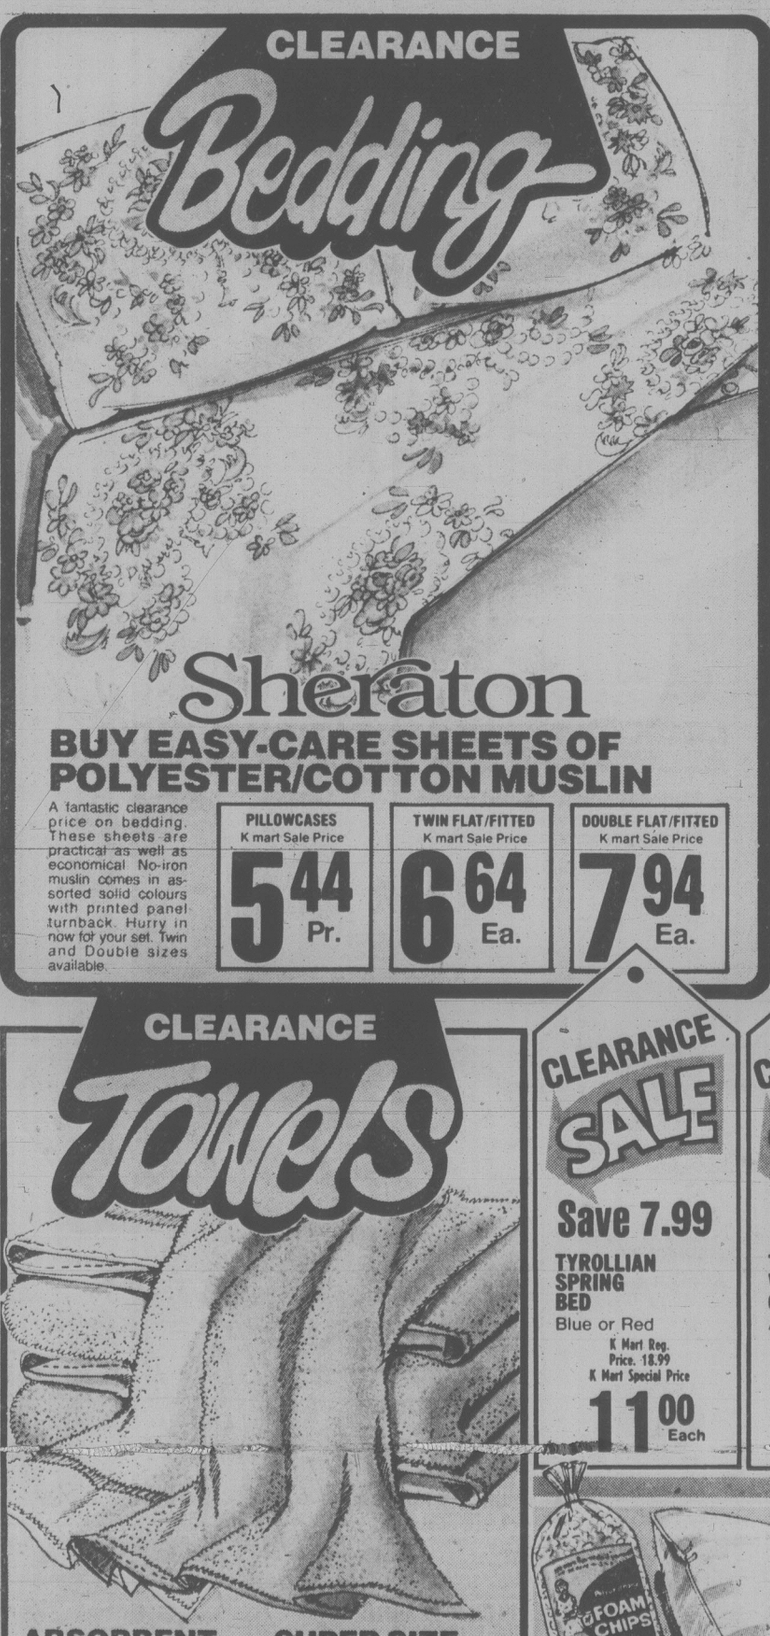

In addition, Smith was fined $150 for refusing a breath test demand and Garraway was ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work.

SPRAWLING freight yard of Canadian Pacific Rail splits a six-kilometre section of inner Winnipeg and has caused headaches for city council. Some residents want the yard moved so the land could be developed to revitalize the Winnipeg core area. Other residents and some city council members say relocation is too costly and would take too long. They want a bridge to ease traffic problems built over the yard instead.

Pickerel fishing 'terrible'

GIMLI, Man. (CP) — Fishermen say the pickerel take at the south end of Lake Winnipeg is the worst in years and a number of them have quit taking their boats out as the spring season draws to a close.

"It's absolutely terrible," said Joe Matheson as he unloaded his nets Monday onto the pier at Gimli, about 100 kilometres north of Winnipeg.

Matheson said he set nine nets overnight and caught only 15 pounds of pickerel.

"I made $8 today and a roast costs $9. It doesn't even pay for my gas," he said.

Oscar Jonasson of Riverton, Man., about 45 kilometres north of Gimli, said he stopped fishing July 6 after netting only about one quarter of his 5,000-pound seasonal quota because he was "going in the hole every day."

A spokesman for the federal Freshwater Fish Marketing Corp. said the poor season may result in higher retail prices for pickerel.

He said a record whitefish season on the north end of Lake Winnipeg means there will be no general fish shortage this year.

The big bad 'beef cycle' can take us all for a ride

United Press Canada

In a free enterprise system like Canada's, economic cycles accompany just about any commodity you can name.

They come and go like clockwork.

When the supply of widgets is down, the price goes up. When the price goes up, widget makers leap into action and flood the market. When the market is flooded, the price goes down.

When you're a consumer looking for widgets at the local store, you can't help but wonder what's going on in the wonderful world of merchandising.

You may try to balance the budget by buying up low-priced widgets and storing them. It's a natural reaction, but in the end such tactics can only accentuate the widget cycle. In the end, nobody benefits.

One of the places consumers notice these cycles most is at the supermarket, where week-to-week fluctuations are highly visible. And, they are most evident at the meat counter — especially in the section set aside for beef roasts and steaks.

This cycle — "The Beef Cycle" — is a source of anguish for consumers when prices are going up, a source of frustration for packers when cattle supplies shrink, and a source of bankruptcy for beef producers who spend 2 ½ years building up a beef herd only to find that the price of steers has sunk below production costs when the first load is ready for market.

How do you control these cyclical surges in supply and demand?

People representing all segments of the beef indstry — from rancher to consumer — tried to answer this question at the Livestock Marketing Congress in Denver, Colo. last month — and failed to find an easy answer.

No consumer advocate, not even outspoken Kathleen O'Reilly of the Consumer Federation of America, suggested a consumer boycott as an answer to high beef prices.

Everyone, from U.S. cattle associations to packers and consumer representatives, warned government against intervening further in the beef business.

The only proposal inviting government participation came from a Canadian, Prof. Murray Hawkins of the University of Alberta, who suggested a government sponsored voluntary trust account for beef producers which would build up in good years and pay out in lean years.

Funded by a check-off on cattle marketings and government contributions, the individual accounts might stabilize the business at the grassroots level and help tame the cycle, Prof. Hawkins said.

But the congress rejected even this mild proposal. In fact, when all the options were examined, beef producers, packers and consumer advocates were left with few concrete ideas.

Ultimately, the congress seemed to agree that the best approach rests in improved marketing information for beef producers, education and counter-cyclical import policies to allow more imported beef into the country in times of short supply and to restrict imports in times of surplus.

After three days of pondering the question, this could hardly be called a revelation.

In fact, by the time all the high-priced speakers and moderators had finished — including notables such as Bill Monroe of NBC's Meet the Press, Dale Tinstman of the giant Iowa Beef Processors Inc., Dr. Gar Aplerovits of the National Centre for Economic Alternatives in Washington, D.C., and William Rush, publisher of the National Review — the most workable idea had come from the Canadian Cattlemen's Association.

The CCA's "Beefwatch" program relies on economic analysis and sound business decisions by cattlemen who influence the beef cycle. By keeping track of Canadian cattle numbers and fluctuations in the national herd, the CCA has been extremely successful in keeping cattlemen informed of where they are in the cycle.

Charles Gacey, CCA manager, told the Denver meeting the real tes of the program's success will come in 1982 or 1983 when Beefwatch will tell cattlemen — and bankers who provide cattlemen with credit — to put the brakes on herd expansion to avoid oversupplying the market.

How important is it for cattlemen to smooth out the peaks and valleys of the beef cycle?

Gracey said, "More moderate livestock cycles are vital to the preservation of the livestock industry.
